GI Raises Signed But LBJ Refuses Construction Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson signed Saturday the $1 billion military pay raise bill, but vetoed a $1.78 billion military construction authorization bill on the ground it infringed upon presidential powers.

Johnson noted that the military pay raise voted by Congress is more than twice the amount he recommended but said in a statement: "In this critical period, however, in the light of the alternative available to me, I have concluded that the public interest will best be served by signing the bill."

The increases it provides range from a flat 6 per cent for officers with more than two years of service to a high of 33.7 per cent for a corporal or a Navy petty officer third class with less than two years of service.

Problem Of Law

In vetoing the military construction authorization, Johnson said in a veto message sent to the clerk of the House that he has been advised by the attorney general that "certain provisions of the bill are repugnant to the Constitution," and that "its enactment would represent a fundamental encroachment on one of the great principles of the American constitutional system, the separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches."

Johnson spent most of the day reviewing the two bills and other legislation with advisers.

Among those with whom he met were Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Deputy Undersecretary of Defense Cyrus R. Vance, Deputy Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark and White House special counsel Lee White.

"It was the advice of these officials that the President take these steps," press secretary Bill D. Moyers told newsmen. Moyers also reported that Johnson consulted by telephone with congressional leaders of both parties as well as members of the committees primarily concerned with the two bills.

Johnson, in vetoing the construction authorization bill, objected to a section which provides no military camp, post, station, base, yard or other installation or facility shall be closed, abandoned, or substantially reduced in mission until 120 days after reports of the proposed action are made to the Armed Services committees of the House and Senate.

Papandreou Leaves City To Campaign

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Ousted Premier George Papandreou left this riot torn capital Saturday for his "march to the people" to drum up support in his conflict with King Constantine, a conflict which has touched off bloody street fighting and outcries against the crown.

In Athens, where the fires of nightlong rioting still smouldered after dawn, Constantine's new crisis premier, Elias Tsirimokos, conferred with army leaders and members of his day-old Cabinet to plan new measures if violence continues.

Revolutionary Action

Tsirimokos said Friday night's outburst, in which 157 persons were injured as 15,000 demonstrators battled 5,000 police, was "a revolutionary action."

Greek Public Prosecutor Panayiotis Nikolodimos said, "This is not rioting; this is insurrection."

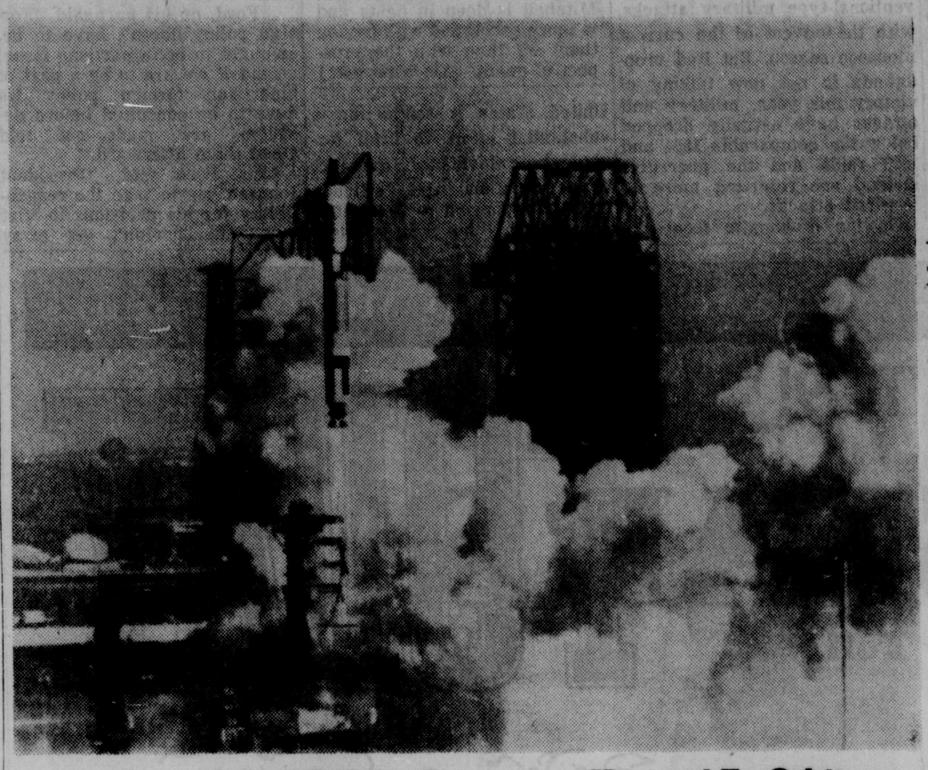
Papandreou followers, teenage students, and many described by police Saturday as "leftists and diehard Communists" kept the fight going for six hours amid cries of: "Down with Constantine" and, "Constantine, take your mother and go."

The violence flared quickly after the 25-year-old monarch swore in Tsirimokos, a former left-wing Socialist, in an attempt to end the worst political crisis in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization since the 1947-9 Communist civil war.

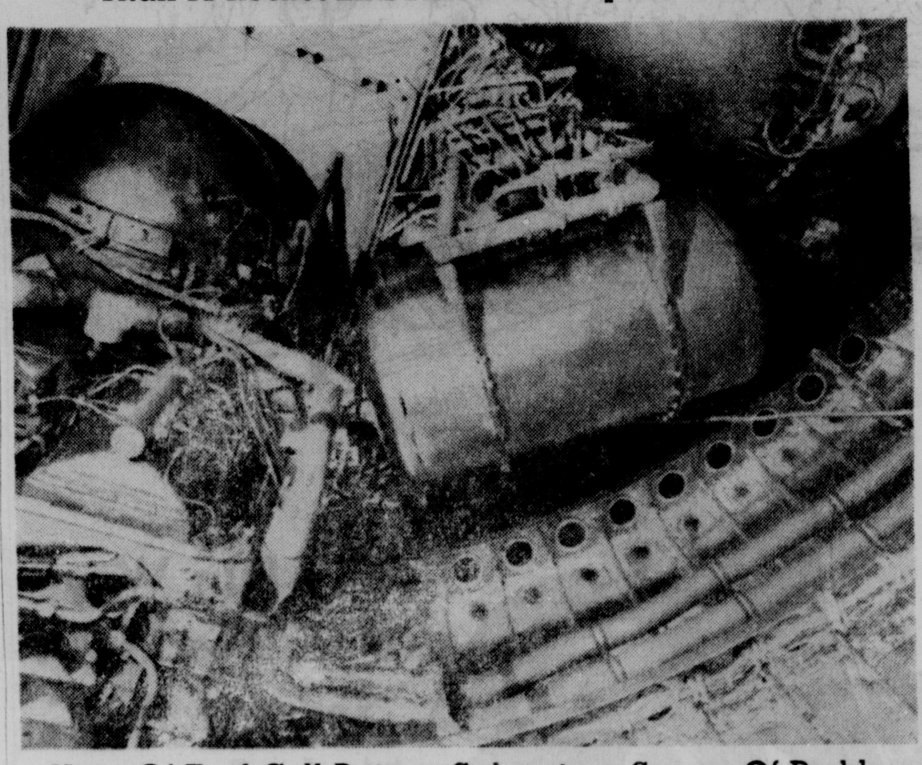
After a meeting with army leaders and Cabinet members, Tsirimokos told newsmen: "The government will take all measures permitted by the constitution and the law to maintain order without putting martial law into effect or using military forces to apply security measures."

The new premier had planned to go before Parliament on Monday to ask for a vote of confidence in his government, but he announced Saturday this would be postponed until Tuesday. He did not say why.

Gemini Pilots Stay In Space But Main Objective Ditched



Titan 11 Rocket Lifts Astronauts Upward To Orbit



View Of Fuel Cell Battery Subsystem, Source Of Problem

Power Fault Cuts Rendezvous Plan

MANNED SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) —Astronauts L. Gordon Cooper Jr. and Charles Conrad Jr. whirled steadily but almost silently around the world early today, still surmounting power trouble that had threatened to bring their flight to an abrupt end.

Their power troubles were so acute they kept their radio contacts to the absolute minimum. In contrast to other flights, this was strictly business, literally unearthly quiet.

The capsule slipped into its 11th orbit at 1:56 a.m. (EDT) over the South Pacific west of the Chilean coast of South America.

The astronauts planned to continue at least to midday — and they had high hopes that they may yet become the first men to spend eight days in space.

But one prime objective of the flight — a rendezvous with a satellite — had already been missed.

Satellite Floats Free

Cooper and Conrad had planned to eject the satellite, back off for 52 miles and then return for a rendezvous, but the loss of power scrubbed this scheme. The satellite floated alongside the space craft for several orbits.

Despite this disappointment, what flight director Christopher C. Kraft had said in late afternoon still stood as the best summation of the flight's prospects.

During the sixth orbit, Kraft said:

"I think we feel we are in reasonably good shape to continue on for the next day, and we have reasonably good confidence that we're going to be able to go on from there and complete the intended duration of this flight—assuming that all other systems continue to function properly that are necessary to the safe conduct of the mission."

Not only are the prospects very good, Kraft told a news conference, but there's a good chance, despite the obstacles, that most of the objectives of the flight would be accomplished.

The immediate goal: 18 orbits. Before these are completed by around noon today a decision will be made on whether to continue.

Rarely has any space flight presented such a confusing picture:

First there was optimism because of a fine, on-time blastoff at 9 a.m. EST from Cape Kennedy. This was replaced by gloom as the power supply went down and stayed there.

Then, after it seemed almost certain the flight would have to be ended, the announcement came: "We are committed for another day."

Finally, at the news conference attended by Kraft and other space officials buoyant optimism again.

"We do feel," Kraft said, "the longer we go the better off we are."

As for the astronauts themselves, Kraft said he was sure they were happy at the decision. Apparently they are in no discomfort, and a reserve battery supply assures that they will have enough power to descend safely in case anything falters.

If the flight is ended after 18 orbits, the astronauts will come back to earth at about 12:18 p.m. Sunday in the primary Atlantic recovery area about 500 miles southwest of Bermuda.

Kraft wanted to stress how well things are going.

At one point during his news conference he said: "We should stress the fact that the fuel cells are working perfectly. There's nothing at all wrong with the fuel cells. It's just that we can't get enough reacting supply of oxygen into the fuel cells. And that you really can't attribute to the fuel cell. So, we're extremely happy with the way those systems are working."

In view of that, it is hardly surprising that the decision was made—go ahead—while Cooper and Conrad were passing over Hawaii on their fifth orbit.

Up to the moment of decision there had been grave doubts as to whether the Gemini 5 flight could go beyond the sixth orbit. Power simply wasn't being delivered as needed.

Six planes and two ships had been sent about 500 miles north of Hawaii, to stand by just in case the astronauts were brought down there.

Cooper and Conrad were anxious to continue, even though it seemed possible that their flight would fall short of the 121 orbits — eight days of circling the world — that had been planned.

Their flight was curiously divided.

For the first three hours all was easy sailing and unlimited optimism.

Cooper and Conrad had dramatically made up for their past frustrations with a perfect blastoff, right on the button at 9 a.m. Everything seemed set for a giant stride toward gathering material that would help put a man on the moon within the next five years.

Then, unexpectedly, came word that trouble was brewing: there had been a steady power loss in the new fuel system that is getting its first trial in an actual flight.

Flight Director Remains 'Calm' In Excitement

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) — Not all the careful calculations in the Gemini 5 space shot Saturday were for the benefit of science and the safety of the astronauts.

One careful scientific calculation turned out to the benefit of the flight director, Christopher C. Kraft—to the tune of $3.

Kraft, with his heart pounding at the rate of 105 beats a minute, won the Mission Control Center pool for being the least excited—as measured by electrocardiograph.

"I've got the three bucks in my pocket," he told a news conference during a light moment.

But his victory had something of a hollow ring to it.

The calmest man in the Mission Control Center was Dr. Charles A. Berry, medical director of the Manned Space Flight Center—a nearly normal 85 heartbeats a minute.

Vietnamese Force Kills 4 Guerrillas

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — South Vietnamese marines, joining U.S. Leathernecks mopping up on Van Tuong Peninsula, battled Viet Cong guerrillas Saturday, killing four and capturing a like number of weapons. A U.S. spokesman described government losses as "very light."

The spokesman reported no fresh contacts between American Marines and the Viet Cong, who took what U.S. officials called their worst beating of the war in a Marine offensive that began Wednesday.

In Saigon, an American spokesman said U.S. and South Vietnamese air force planes flew missions over the peninsula, 12 miles south of Chu Lai, in support of the mopping up operations. He said the airmen reported they caught perhaps 400 Viet Cong in the open and estimated that they killed 55 of them.

564 Cong Dead

Earlier Lt. Gen. Victor Krulak, commander of Marine forces in the Pacific, told newsmen at Da Nang that Leatherneck ground forces had confirmed 564 Viet Cong guerrillas killed in the three-day fight.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said that the rolls of enemy dead may reach as many as 1,000. They based this opinion on the fact that only about half the embattled area had been searched.

Marine casualties, Krulak said, were one per cent of the battle force killed and 3-per cent wounded. He did not give the casualty totals in numbers. Military spokesmen have said the Marine assault involved a regimental landing force which normally numbers 5,000 to 6,000 men.

Krulak was asked how many Marines were in the fighting during a news conference at Da Nang.

"It's hard to decide when involvement begins. There is the 3rd Force Service Regiment that has an element there and a logistics support unit in Chu Lai. Are they participants or aren't they? I'd just as soon not try to equate it," he replied.

Krulak added that "By Korea or World War II standards the casualties were light, But I don't want to take it lightly."

Massachusetts Governor Calls National Guard

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Gov. John A. Volpe Saturday night ordered two Massachusetts National Guard units placed on alert for today's "Selma-type" civil rights march in this racially tense city.

Volpe also ordered that state police be placed on alert "to ensure a peaceful civil rights demonstration today in Springfield and to safeguard all citizens and property in the Springfield area."

Volpe's orders came shortly after civil rights leaders were granted a "conditional" parade permit to stage a massive downtown march today that authorities fear could well turn this historic city into another [illegible] Ala.

False Alarm

Units of the Monroe fire department rushed to the scene shortly after noon Saturday when neighbors reported billows of smoke rising from a residence at 2509 Gordon Ave.

Arriving at the "blaze" with hoses at the ready, firemen found that where there's smoke, there isn't necessarily fire. The property was being fogged for mosquitoes.

Guard To Stay Another Week In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — National Guard troops were ordered Saturday to remain on duty for another week to assure continued peace in south Los Angeles, torn by the nation's worst Negro rioting of the century.

State Adjutant Gen. Roderic Hill announced Guard plans Saturday and promptly added new fuel to the bitter feud building between Gov. Edmund G. Brown and Mayor Samuel W. Yorty.

He said much of the damage could have been avoided had the Guard been called out 12 hours earlier on Friday, Aug. 13, the worst day of the riot. The city did not request the Guard troops until almost noon that day.

Hill said as far as the military is concerned, the riot situation "is definitely over." But he said 1,000 or more Guardsmen will stay on "as long as it is felt necessary by police."

Fuel Cell System Tricky Maneuver

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The fuel cell system that was to provide power for the eight day Gemini flight — but caused trouble early in the mission — is tricky, born of man's need to coax more power out of nature.

The two fuels for the power system are oxygen and hydrogen which the fuel cells turn into charged gases and blend, producing water. At the same time, the fuel cell reaps the extra electrons yielded by the process, and sends these out as current.

It is a neat and efficient idea. The problem is making it work.

To carry enough oxygen and hydrogen, space scientists went to very low temperatures, storing the gases in their most dense form, a sort of snowy slush, to get the most possible into the storage tanks.

Storage Problem

The hydrogen was stored at 423 degrees below zero, the oxygen at 297 below.

This provided problems too. The temperature throughout the tanks must be homogenous or uniform, or else a temperature stratification would occur that could block usage of some of the gas.

The tanks are well insulated — an outer shell of titanium, a vacuum, a layer of plastic and an inner shell of stainless steel. Around the inner shell is a winding of wire that provides heat much as an electric blanket does.

As the frozen gases warm up, they effervesce, boil off as gas at high pressures — up to 800 pounds per square inch. This gas is then released by valves into the fuel cell itself.

Ironically, the trouble seems to lie in the wiring heater that girds the oxygen storage bottle. Experts reason that a power surge that hit the spacecraft electrical system during a thunderstorm Thursday — postponing the flight — damaged the wire heater. The power surge was believed to have come from a lightning bolt.

Area Showers Forecast Today

Skies today and Monday will be partly cloudy, according to the U. S. Weather Bureau forecast, with afternoon and evening thundershowers predicted to affect 30 to 50 per cent of the area.

High Saturday was 95 degrees between 1 and 2 p.m., and the early morning low was 73.

Today's maximum reading should be between 92 and 96 degrees and the minimum will be 70 to 75. High and low readings a year ago today were 84 and 72.

A trace of rain was measured from scattered showers Saturday in the Twin Cities area.

Variable winds today should be five to 15 miles an hour.

Kashmir Guerrillas

India Expects Long Battle

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An Indian analysis showed Saturday that guerrillas fighting in Kashmir have achieved a limited success and that a long, hard campaign may be ahead.

This assessment, said 16 days of strife in Kashmir, was presented to the parliamentary executive of the governing Congress Party and reported by government radio.

Despite an all-out effort by thousands of Indian troops, Defense Minister Y. B. Chavan estimated that 3,000 to 5,000 guerrillas are still loose in Kashmir.

This represents a considerable increase in the number of what India calls "Pakistan infiltrators" roaming the mountains and valleys of the Himalayan state.

New Delhi initially charged that Pakistan sent 1,500 to 2,000 infiltrators into Kashmir Aug. 5 to overturn Indian rule and that it ordered smaller groups in at later dates.

Chavan said Indian forces have "incapacitated" about 1,000 guerrillas, 800 killed or captured. However, the Defense Ministry claims only 360 guerrillas killed and confirmed by body count.

It was clear the Indian army is finding it no easy task to seal off guerrilla routes and hunt down the well armed bands that have killed at least 125 Indians by New Delhi's own admission.

The guerrillas' ability to stay in operation this long, deep in Indian territory, indicated also that they are getting some support from Kashmiris opposed to Indian rule. It would appear impossible for large guerrilla bands to hide without cooperation from the local populace.

Pakistan, denying it sent infiltrators into Kashmir, claims Kashmiri Moslems are revolting against Hindu India's rule and that this accounts for the guerrillas' success.

Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri told the party meeting there was no room for complacency even though there has been a slackening in guerrilla activity in the past two days.

"We have to be prepared to meet the situation as it develops," he said.

Shastri added that India would welcome support of other countries, but "we will have to do whatever we think correct."

There is a great deal of bitterness in New Delhi about what Indians say is the failure of "friendly countries" to support publicly India's claim that Pakistan has launched "thinly veiled aggression."

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The rebel controlled radio Sadai Kashmir announced today that "freedom fighters" have "liberated" a sizable area in the Baramula district of Indian-occupied Kashmir and have established a headquarters somewhere near Baramula. Baramula is about 40 miles east of the cease-fire line in the Indian area.

The broadcast said the number of revolutionary forces had considerably increased in this area and that regular military training is being given to these men.

Coker Is Named Agent Of Year

A Monroe man, D. R. (Doug) Coker, of 2220 Island Dr., was named "Agent of the Year" at the recent meeting of the Louisiana Mutual Agents Association held in Biloxi, Miss.

The selection was made by the "1752 Club," an organization made up of field representatives of mutual fire and casualty insurance companies.

The state group held its annual meeting at the Edgewater Gulf Hotel with mutual agents from all parts of Louisiana attending.

Coker, a native of west Texas and a graduate of Texas Tech at Lubbock, is manager for insurance at Troy and Nichols here and has been associated with that firm since 1954.

Plane Downed

TOKYO (AP) — Peking radio said Sunday a U.S. pilotless reconnaissance plane was shot down over Hainan Island on Saturday.

Hainan Island is China's southernmost island facing North Viet Nam across the Gulf of Tonkin.

The Peking broadcast, monitored here, said the American aircraft was brought down by Communist Chinese navy units.

Losses May Spur New Red Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Johnson administration officials said Saturday severe Viet Cong battlefield losses indicate the Reds will have to choose between intensifying their war effort or seeking peace.

The officials said U.S. intelligence cannot know how debate is going in the inner councils at Hanoi and Peking, and therefore they are unwilling to predict which path the Communists will take or just when. They guess the Reds will pursue their current guerrilla offensive for another couple of months.

However, some things have been happening, the U.S. officials said, which indicate that the Communists may want to change their present course. The administration sources said:

— Viet Cong guerrillas suffered very heavy casualties last week — 1,300 dead, six times the number of South Vietnamese and Americans killed — and the Communist toll this week will be even higher after the final count comes in.

— The Viet Cong losses are not just in large engagements such as the spectacular U.S. Marine victory at Chu Lai, but are occurring in hundreds of small engagements too. For instance, a South Vietnamese force on Aug. 13, following up a B52 strike, killed 31 Viet Cong and captured 52 at the cost of only nine wounded.

— South Vietnamese morale is clearly on the rise, and so are reports of lopsided victories over the guerrillas in numerous engagements.

— The Reds had been expected to move into a new strategy, employing large units in conventional-type military attacks, with the advent of the current monsoon season. But Red propaganda is not now talking of victory this year, military unit attacks have actually dropped below the comparable 1964 and 1963 raids and the guerrillas instead are resorting more to terrorist attacks.

On the diplomatic front the United States is conducting a substantial effort to brief foreign governments on the Viet Nam situation. U.S. officials estimate some 60 to 70 nations now support the U.S. position.

Ike's Words Not Slowing GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) —House Republicans are not going to spike their foreign policy guns because former President Dwight D. Eisenhower took some of their ammunition, House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford said Saturday.

Nor, the Michigan congressman declared in an interview, "will be muzzled" by President Johnson.

Ford, as one Republican colleague put it, is forced to walk "a very thin line" in his efforts to strengthen GOP House ranks in 1966 and present his party's views without appearing to weaken national unity in a time of crisis over Viet Nam.

Further he has the indirect injunction from Eisenhower that "When our country is in a position of crisis there is only one thing a good American can do, and that is support the president."

Ford, on his part,said "Foreign policy doesn't have to be, or ought to be, a partisan issue, . . but if we are to be a part of bipartisan foreign policy we have to be consulted before decisions are made—not told about them afterward."

Also, Ford said, "President Johnson has to take the responsibility for his decisions in Viet Nam. He shouldn't get away with saying he is carrying out a commitment Eisenhower made in 1954."

Thus Ford is going ahead with plans to issue this week a lengthy "white paper" on Viet Nam chronicling which administration made what commitment when.

Expressing the view that past miscalculations don't instill confidence in the future, Ford said the paper will also include a rundown of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's optimistic assessments of the Viet Nam war before it went from bad to worse.

Ford appeared Thursday, after a top-level GOP meeting at Eisenhower's Gettysburg farm, to be a man who just had the limb sawed off behind him while he was seeking a strong election issue.

While not critizing the general policy of taking a strong stand in Viet Nam, House GOP leaders have objected to Johnson saying that Eisenhower was the source of the U.S. commitment to Viet Nam. They also had some angry words for the administration's decision to give up the battle to force the Soviet Union, France and other U.N. members to pay up their back peacekeeping assessments.

Last Tuesday, after confering with GOP congressional leaders in Washington, Eisenhower gave some indication he was not altogether out of sympathy with their views.

Fearful Youths Leave Job Camp

MORGANFIELD, Ky. (UPI) —Hundreds of youths, who had come to a nearby federal Job Corps center with hopes high, left it Saturday driven by fear.

"They (hoodlums) threatened to kill me three different times," said Gilbert Blankenship, 18, of Jamestown, Ky., as he boarded a bus to leave.

About 150 poured out of the center at Camp Breckinridge Friday night, along with most of the teaching staff, after a three-hour riot in which 10 were injured. Another 100 left Saturday and more were expected to leave.

Up to 500 of the 650 white and Negro youths at the center were involved in the rioting. State troopers, FBI agents and U.S. marshals remained near the center Saturday.

Seven youths were arrested for drunkenness and brought before a magistrate in Owensboro, who dismissed the charges at the request of Job Corps officials.

Blankenship said, "There were eight guys (Negroes) in my dorm who threatened to kill me. I'm leaving here until I think it is safe to come back."

Blankenship said his locker was broken into and clothing and money were stolen. Ralph Allen, 18, of Pascagoula, Miss., another who is leaving, also said his locker was broken into and clothing and money taken.

Myrick Sees Insurance Raises

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana faces rate boosts on auto liability and homeowners policies, the chairman of a legislative study committee said Saturday.

Sen. Spencer Myrick, Oak Grove, made the prediction when asked for his views on insurance developments in this state.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, two divisions of the Louisiana Insurance Rating Commission will sit down privately with insurance industry representatives to see what should be done.

The conferences are the result of a closed-door talk the insurance industry had several days ago with Carlos Spaht, the governor's executive counsel, on the troubled insurance market in Louisiana.

Spaht announced "something should be done," and said the industry would assign technicians to the conferences with the casualty and surety division of the rating commission.

Also, on Aug. 31, a public hearing has been scheduled on proposals which could cause an annual raise of about $4.5 million for employers in the workmen's compensation field. The oil drilling industry particularly is watching this development.

Myrick headed a legislative committee study on auto liability insurance. He conducted extensive public hearings before the 1965 legislature.

These hearings came just after the casualty and surety division had granted auto liability rate increases averaging 14.75 per cent, when the industry had demanded twice that much.

State Commissioner Guglielmo attempted without success in the legislature to win support for what he called a "file-and-use" insurance program by which companies themselves would set their own rates. He said this would help solve Louisiana's problem.

Hathorn Says ZIP Code Aids Area Mail

By DIANE TAYLOR
World Staff Writer

Do you use ZIP code? If you don't, you're probably not getting the best possible mail service.

The local postmaster said the use of ZIP code, now entering its third year, saves money, reduces the possibility of error and speeds your mail delivery.

The Post Office Department's ZIP code was defined by Monroe Postmaster Woodrow W. Hathorn as an economy measure to cope with the nation's mounting mail volume without an "unmanageable" increase in its workroom personnel.

The local postmaster said ZIP code has had a wide acceptance but its continued progress will depend on the voluntary cooperation of the mailing public.

"If we didn't have ZIP code, and if we didn't have wholehearted public support for the program," he said, "in a few years the avalanche of mail burdening our post office could make the blizzard of '88 seem like a gentle snow flurry."

Hathorn said the only alternative to ZIP code would be an enormous increase in postal personnel, costly expansion of postal space, burgeoning postal rates and "a postal gap between income and expenditures wider than the Grand Canyon."

Nationally, many of the largest firms are pre - sorting their mail according to ZIP code numerals and the post offices are shipping this mail directly from its source to the sectional center nearest its destination. In that process, several time - consuming handlings along the way are eliminated.

One popular women's magazine, for example, reports that deliveries from its publishing plants in New York to Louisiana have been speeded up by 24 hours in all cases, and by 48 hours in nearly half the cases. That's progress, no matter how you look at it.

"How much more progress we make," said Hathorn, "will depend on the degree of voluntary cooperation given by the mailing public."

The Monroe Post Office processes a share of the 70 billion pieces of mail generated nationally. The volume rises at the rate of 2½ billion pieces per year and by 1970 will total 90 billion.

ZIP Code is designed to solve the problem of rising volumes by cutting down on the number of times the mail is handled.

The postmaster explained there are five different ZIP code numbers used in the City of Monroe and a different one for West Monroe. Area one of the City of Monroe is bounded on the north by the Illinois Central Railroad, on the west by the Ouachita River, on the south by Richwood Road No. 1 and on the east by the Missouri Pacific Railroad. All those homes and establishments within this area are including in zip code 71201.

Using code 71202 are homes and businesses within carrier area two which is bounded on the north by Illinois Central Railroad, on the west by Missouri Pacific Railroad, on the south by Richwood Road No. 1, and on the east by U. S. Hwy. 165 by - pass.

Firms and residences within Ouachita area one use ZIP code 71204. These are within the area bounded on the north by Bayou DeSiard, and on the west by Ouachita River, on the south by Illinois Central Railroad and on the east by AL & M Railroad, Cedar St., and Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Ouachita area two, using ZIP code 71205, includes the homes and establishments within the area bounded on the north by the south and east banks of Bayou DeSiard up to and including Bayou Oaks Sub-Division, on the west by A L & M Railroad, Missouri Pacific Railroad and Cedar Street, on the south by Illinois Central Railroad and on the east by Missouri Pacific Railroad, east line of Selman Field and Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Main office boxes are included in the fifth code, 71203.

All West Monroe addresses use code 71291.

Area towns use 712 with the following last two digits: Alto, 16; Ansley, 17; Archibald, 18; Baskin, 19; Bastrop, 20; Bernice 22; Bonita, 23; Bosco, 24; Calhoun, 25; Chatham, 26; Choudrant, 27; Clay, 28; Collinston, 29; Crowville, 30; Darnell, 31; Delhi, 32; Delta, 33; Downsville, 34; Dubach, 35; Dunn, 36; Epps, 37; Eros, 38; Extension, 39; Fairbanks, 40.

City Completes $1.3 Million In Electrical Improvements

Improvements to the city's electrical transmission system, totaling $1,319,893 have now been completed, it was announced Saturday by French L. Smith, manager of the Utilities Commission. Money to finance the new construction was taken from savings in bond monies, from operating revenues and the renewal fund, Smith said.

"This has all been made possible," Smith stated, "through the efficient management of the Utilities Commission members who work without salary." The commission is composed of David Kaplan, chairman, Charles H. Bird, vice-chairman, F. L. Jones, secretary, Harry L. Stone, and James F. Benton.

Main features of the improvements are a new 69,000 volt switchyard at the power plant on Park Ave., two new 69,000 volt transmission lines that loop the entire city, and a new 50,000 KVA sub-station in South Monroe, located at 18th and Hickory.

In addition, six new 13,800 volt feeder lines were installed to carry power from the sub-station to the load areas in South Monroe. This will relieve the capacity of the present feeders that serve the North and East sides of the city.

Smith indicated that the new lines, switchyard and sub-station were constructed to improve service and increase electrical system capacity to meet future load growth, as well as to serve the city's new disposal plant.

"It has been the Utilities Commission's aim to constantly stay up with the increasing demands for electrical service. The latest construction has been done to improve our overall service and yet has been accomplished without increased cost to the users".

The increase in feeder lines from 12 to 18 will relieve the transmission load emanating from the power plant, by distributing the load over more lines, Smith said. This results in improved efficiency of electrical distribution because each such a heavy load, he said.

In addition, Smith said, "the new system can be called on to provide service to blacked out areas in emergencies."

In 1957, when the Utilities Commission took over the operation of the electrical system, the power plant had 34,500 Kilowatt generating capacity. This was increased in 1958 to 44,000 KW with the installation of a gas turbine, in 1961 to 66,500 KW with the addition of a steam turbine, and again this year to 99,500 KW when still another steam turbine was added.

The two new 69,000 volt transmission lines originate at the new power plant switchyard and form a loop supply around the city to the new southside sub-station. The lines are designed not only to supply the new sub-station, but also to serve any future sub-stations that may be required at other locations in Monroe, thus providing capacity for future load growth.

Lucy Hurls Wind At Japan's Coast

TOKYO (UPI) — Typhoon Lucy sent strong fringe winds against the Pacific Coast of Japan Saturday. Thirty-foot waves were reported at Shikoku Island and heavy rains disrupted rail service in many areas.

Honshu, Japan's largest island which includes the Tokyo region, was braced to receive a battering from the Pacific storm.

The roofs of about 80 homes in the Tokyo suburbs were blown away and about 7,000 homes flooded by the early stages of the storm. The typhoon's center was located 186 miles southeast of Cape Shionomi in central Japan.

Weathermen said the storm center contained winds of 125 miles an hour with winds of 50 miles an hour within about 125 mile radius.

Research Institute Fund Drive Opens

Business leaders in Monroe and the Fifth District have joined with the rest of the state to raise $1 million for the Gulf South Research Institute, a private, non - profit organization devoted to promoting Louisiana and to attracting new industry to the State.

Area chairman of GSRI fund-raising effort, George Weaks, president Weaks Supply, Monroe, has announced a goal of $105,000 for the Fifth District. Weaks stated that a gift of $2,250 from the Central United Foundation of Central Savings Bank was "one of the first gifts we've received". Other gifts from area businesses include those by Olin Mathieson and International Paper Co.

Weaks said that local and area businesses are being invited to pledge gifts to the Institute over a three - year period. "There has been a most encouraging spontaneous response around the state from businesses interested in promoting our state's future growth. It is hoped that many more firms will follow suit."

The Research Institute is to perform a research service for both the state and private enterprise. The institute has been endorsed by Gov. John McKeithen, and about $3.5 million in state funds has been appropriated for the institute. Businesses and industry are being called on to provide an additional $1 million in private capital.

Monroe citizens serving on the board of trustees of the Gulf South Research Institute include M. H. Collet, Olin Mathieson; M. R. Howell, Columbian Carbon; George Phillips, Ford, Bacon and Davis, and Dr. George T. Walker, president Northeast State College. Congressman Otto E. Passman, of Monroe, is an ex-officio member of the board. Other prominent citizens of Northeast Louisiana also serve on the board.

Ealier this month, Gov. McKeithen, speaking to a gathering in New Orleans, said of the institute, "A major part of the long range look, the future growth and development of our state, I am convinced will depend to a large degree on how we develop our scientific and technological capabilities. Other states and regions have found the creation of such research centers an important factor in their economic development."

The institute has been called "A Key to Louisiana's Future". Weaks said, "Abundance of natural resources no longer guarantees economic prosperity. The full use of the state's human talents and abilities is necessary to keep Louisiana abreast for the science revolution that has occurred in the past decade.

"After an extensive examination of the problem, it was determined that the best solution would be the creation of a science - economics research institute in the State, dedicated to the growth and development of the State."

As a first step, GSRI was chartered in May of 1964 under the trusteeship of approximately 100 leaders in the fields of business, industry, education and labor. The plan for this institute was developed by a special committee of the Council for A Better Louisiana.

The Louisiana Legislature has created the Louisiana Science Foundation to work closely with the institute to develop Louisiana economically and to strengthen its scientific community.

ONE OF THE FIRST local contributions to the Gulf South Research Institute was made by Central United Foundation, Inc., representing gifts from the company and employees of Central Savings Bank and Trust Co. Here, Charles Womack, left, president of Central United Foundation presents a gift for $2,250 to George Weaks, area chairman of GSRI, fund-raising effort. Other gifts from area businesses included those made by Olin Mathieson and International Paper. The institute is seeking funds around the state to help promote Louisiana and to help attract industry to the state.

SPOTLIGHTING THE AREA

Back Again

With Jimmy Hatten

ONCE AGAIN, East Carroll Parish residents are being tested on the race issue question. A few years ago, when Negro voters in the parish were about as plentiful as bayous in Wisconsin, national network cameramen were rushed into the parish looking for an outbreak of violence.

None came as about 40 Negroes were registered at the parish registrar's office.

Since that time, plenty of things have happened in race matters all over the country, but very little there, with the exception of a "freedom ride north" campaign that found Negroes boarding vehicles at white expense to find their fortunes in such distant and self - acclaimed "'non - bigoted" areas as Redwood Falls, Minn.

As it turned out, Redwood Falls wasn't bigoted until the first Negroes arrived.

DURING THOSE TIMES, the situation was more a matter of technicalities than anything else, however.

But now, the white people in East Carroll Parish find themselves just about outnumbered by Negro voters. The most "unprejudiced" people in the world would have to do a lot of thinking under those circumstances, it would seem. Negroes outnumber white people in the parish by about eight to five.

The trying aspect of the whole situation to the people there must be the fact that completely illiterate Negroes are being signed up, by federal men sent in by a government administration that pre-judged the parish to the extent that it made the statement it figured parishes or counties like East Carroll would not abide by the new voting rights law.

THIS WOULD SEEM to be more of a discriminatory act by the fact that prejudice was involved on the part of the government itself; that the parish, which has until now, accepted, however grudgingly, laws as laid down.

Here, then, is a parish, abiding by the law under extremely trying times, frustrated, baked by the heat of summertime.

Go tell that to Watts Community, Los Angeles.

The fall district conference will be held Sunday, Oct. 17, at a time and place to be announced later.

All World War I and II veterans and veterans of the Korean Conflict are eligible to attend the meeting and to join the legion, Dupont said.

Welcome Pastor

HOMER (Special) — Members of the First Baptist Church of Homer will welcome their new pastor, Dr. Billy K. Smith at today's morning services. A tea for Dr. Smith and family will be held from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

Catholic Schools Must Integrate In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Complete desegregation of Mississippi Catholic schools was to be announced Saturday by the Most Reverend Richard O. Gerow, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Natchez-Jackson.

In a letter to be read today at all masses in the parishes of the state, the bishop said that, "Beginning immediately the doors of our parochial schools are open to all qualified Catholic students in all grades."

German Guards Hold GI's After Border Incident

BERLIN (UPI) — Ten East German border guards arrested three American soldiers who strayed across the border Saturday and held them for one hour.

Western officials said they were questioned but not mistreated.

The soldiers were picked up by the Eastern police on the East-West Berlin border at Potsdamer Platz, once a busy square that is now split by the wall.

An Army spokesman said they were resting between patrols along the Western side of the wall when the incident took place.

Legion Members Already Hear Policy Defense

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Delegates to the American Legion convention are hearing strong defense of U.S. policy in Viet Nam, even before the start of general sessions.

Thousands more visitors Saturday joined a convention throng expected to reach 25,000 by the time National Commander Donald Johnson of West Branch, Iowa, calls the first general session to order Tuesday morning.

While committee meetings and drum and bugle competition occupied early arrivals, Johnson and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., voiced strong support of U.S. actions in Viet Nam.

Johnson said at a press conference Friday night Americans must understand that U.S. troops will remain in Viet Nam "for many years after military operations are over" to aid the economy and help the government recover.

He said the legionnaires asked at their convention last year for an increased commitment in Viet Nam.

"We are gratified that the government took the steps," Johnson said.

In speech prepared for Saturday's meeting of the legion's National Security Commission, Sen. Jackson said: "We can be grateful for the way President Johnson is demonstrating a cool and resolute determination to block the Communist effort to subjugate all of Viet Nam. His determination is backed by the firm will of the people."

Murder Charges Placed On Deputy

HAYNEVILLE, Ala. (AP) — A part-time deputy sheriff charged with killing a young clergyman engaged in civil rights work and critically wounding another was freed Saturday on $12,500 bond posted by friends.

Thomas L. Coleman, 55, a member of a prominent southern Alabama family, was arraigned before a justice of the peace on charges of murder and assault with intent to murder.

Meanwhile, the wounded churchman, the Rev. Richard Morrisroe, 26, a Catholic priest from Chicago, fought for his life in a Montgomery hospital.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Morrisroe, flew from Chicago on Saturday to the hospital where two teams of doctors operated on the young priest in shifts Friday night.

Coleman, a highway engineer who also works part time as a special sheriff's deputy, turned himself in after the shooting Friday outside a small frame grocery store.

The blast from an automatic shotgun killed Jonathan Daniels, 27, a theology student from Keene, N.H., and wounded Morrisroe in the abdomen.

As Daniels lay dying on a gravel lane, witnesses said he made one request. He asked for an ice cream sandwich.

Daniels, a student at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass., and Father Morrisroe, assistant pastor at St. Columbanus church in Chicago, had been working in Lowndes County as civil rights volunteers. They were released from the county jail only two hours before the shooting.

The pair had been arrested with a score of other civil rights workers, most of them Negroes, at nearby Fort Deposit on Aug. 14. They were held in the county jail under $100 bond each because the Fort Deposit jail was too small to accommodate them.

Sheriff Frank Ryals said his office received a report Friday of a disturbance at the grocery store, about 500 yards from the county courthouse.

He said Coleman, who happened to be at the courthouse, answered the call as a special deputy.

Just what happened immediately prior to the shooting was not made known. Neither law enforcement officers nor Coleman's attorney would discuss it.

Russians Listen To Live Account Of Gemini Blast

LONDON (UPI) — Millions of Russians along with all of Western Europe Saturday listened to live radio broadcasts of the Gemini 5 spacecraft launching. Films of the blastoff were rushed to London by jet plane within 15 minutes of the firing.

"It's a great scientific achievement," said a Moscow secretary.

"If it serves the welfare of mankind, it makes no difference who did it."

Guide To Good Reading

Superior Novel Described Here

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

This week I have a really superior novel to recommend to you. It is "Thomas" written by Shelley Mydans. The author spent seven years in research into the story of Thomas A Becket and Henry II of England and she amassed a great deal of knowledge about the life of this remarkable man. She gives us a picture of his early years, his friendship with the King and the change in their relationship. When Henry found that he placed God before man and king, his love turned to enmity. This is a powerful story and one that will be long remembered.

Norah Lofts is a writer of greater than average ability and her new novel with a religious background is certain to be well-received. The title is "How Far to Bethlehem?" It is the story of Mary and Joseph and also that of Melchior, a dedicated astronomer, who had seen the Star in the East and read the future of a child destined for greatness. It is also the story of Gaspar, a chieftan from the Asian plains and of Balthazar, as escaped slave with a superior knowledge of tongues and writing. Miss Lofts has retold the story in modern manner and it is certain to be well-received. For readers of mystery stories there is a new title, "A Woven Web" by Pierre Audemars and a web of international intrigue it turns out to be. The scene shifts from England to France and to Switzerland and it is a most exciting, although involved story.

Last spring Dr. Alfred O. Hero Jr., a native Louisiana was the speaker at the Book Dinner at the Louisiana Library Association. At that time he talked about his book "The Southerner and World Affairs" which was soon to be published by the L.S.U. Press. It is now available and Dr. Hero has give a very scholarly presentation of the change in attitude toward world affairs of the Southern people. Whether all of his conclusions are correct, the reader can judge for himself, but it is a book for the thoughtful reader. "Day of Trinity" by Lansing Lamont tell many facts which have been revealed before about the work leading up to the explosion of the first atom bomb. He shows us how the terrible secrecy affected the lives of many of the participants. This is a most readable book and those who would not think of reading a scientific account, will welcome this popular one.

A most interesting book in the field of conservation is "The Destruction of California" written by Raymond F. Dasmann. The author shows how wantonly the natural resources of this great state have been squandered and pleads for a change in policy and an appraisal of what is left for future generations. A small book which should be purchased by everyone planning to travel abroad is called "Being Ill". This is a small handbook for tourists, which will help you get medical care and attention in England, France, Italy, Germany, Spain or Russia. If you fear that you have influenza and call on a French doctor, you will say "I'ai la grippe", but if he is an Italian the correct phrase is "Ho L'influenza". If he is Spanish physician, you say "Tengo gripe" and if you are in a German speaking country, your is "Ich habe Grippe".

"Never Call Retreat" is the final volume of Bruce Catton's momumental Centennial History of the Civil War. It traces the war from Fredericksburg through the grim campaign which culminated in the surrender at Appomatax. Mr. Catton has given us a wonderful history of this conflict and this book is a fitting climax.

Man, 84, Hurt In Explosion At Haynesville

HOMER (Special) — M. D. Welch, 84, has been hospitalized following an explosion which demolished his home about 12 miles east of Haynesville on La. Hwy. 15.

The accident occurred about 5:30 a.m. Friday. It is believed that Welch probably struck a match to light a stove and the flame ignited leaking butane which might have accumulated in the building. He suffered second degree burns over his feet, face and chest and a broken left arm.

Credited with saving the mans life was a refrigerator which supported a falling partition, preventing it from crushing him, according to Chief Deputy Thomas Daniels. The home and furnishings were destroyed, with a chest being blown across the road. The only object remaining was the refrigerator.

Welch was first taken to the General Hospital and later transferred to an El Dorado hospital for treatment. He was reported improving.

ZOO SPAWNS FAWNS

MANCHESTER, England — (UPI) — A pair of fawns named "Saturday" and "Sunday" have been born to deer at the Bellevue zoo. The two mothers and the father which sired both fawns had been given hormone treatment.

Pros And Cons On Civilian Review Board Is Discussed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The cry of police brutality has resounded across the nation once again in the wake of riots in the Negro section of Los Angeles.

Coupled with the accusation is a demand for a civilian review board to oversee the activities of the individual policeman, especially in his relations with Negro and other minority groups.

Opposition

Leading the opposition to civilian review of police is FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who has written:

"It is a practice that could damage effective law enforcement and reduce the orderly processes of community life to petty bickering, suspicion and hatred. The police executive cannot become a mere pawn of bureaucratic committees. He must have full responsibility for the performance, discipline and control of his officers."

Hoover obviously summarizes what many law enforcement officers contend, that police whose conduct is subject to civilian review will be virtually paralyzed in carrying out their duties.

Mississippi Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson has called the pressure for civilian review boards "a well-planned, deep-seated conspiracy to undermine public confidence in law enforcement officials."

The Negro point of view is given by June Smith, president of the Seattle chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has unsuccessfully fought for a civil review board. Mrs. Smith says:

"There should be some agency outside the police department where the Negro can feel he will get an even break with the white man."

And Prof. Ernest Barth of the University of Washington told a city council hearing on the proposed Seattle board, "police brutality is a widespread problem."

Dropped It

Salt Lake City dropped the proposal for a civilian review board after the city's public safety commissioner polled police chiefs around the country and got an unfavorable consensus. Race was not a factor in the discussion there, and Harriet Brewster of the Utah American Civil Liberties Union, says:

"The police don't want a bunch of civilians telling them what to do and I can understand this attitude. But our suggestion for a review board is for the purpose of actually aiding them, by making their problems known and alerting the citizenry."

Most police departments review citizens' complaints against their officers. The argument advanced against this is that police superiors are inclined to defend the honor of the department by favoring the accused cop. Exponents of the civilian review board see it as a court of appeals outside the influence of the police department.

Philadelphia is one of the few cities with a civilian review board, known as the Police Advisory Board. Set up in 1958, it has handled more than 500 complaints, making recommendations to the police department but lacking disciplinary authority. In a majority of cases, its nine members have cleared accused policemen and dismissed charges.

There was no sharp rise in complaints after last year's Negro rioting in North Philadelphia. Chief opposition to the board centers within police ranks.

Review Board

Another city with a civilian review board is Rochester, N.Y., and its establishment in 1963 failed to head off civil rights disturbances that swept the city a year later.

The Rochester board is made up of nine nonsalaried members. They hear complaints and recommend action.

The board has been good for Rochester, because it has brought better understanding, says Mayor Frank T. Lamb.

However, the executive committee of Rochester Citizens for Abolition of the Police Advisory Board, contends:

"The continued existence of this board constitutes an unhealthy restraint upon law enforcement in our community."

Since its founding, the Rochester board has acted upon only a handful of the hundreds of cases investigated by the police department's own internal review agency.

Washington, D. C., has had a complaint review board since 1948. It hasn't been very active. Recently, civil liberties groups complained that its procedures were weighted heavily in favor of policemen, and its membership was enlarged from three members to five.

New York City's 25,000-man police force has vigorously resisted extreme pressure by civil rights groups for a civilian review board, especially since the 1964 riots in Harlem and Brooklyn. They followed the slaying of a Negro youth by an off-duty patrolman, who later was exonerated by police superiors and a grand jury of any wrongdoing. He said the youth attacked him with a knife during a disturbance.

Springfield, Mass., currently is in the throes of a dispute over alleged police brutality. It stems from arrests July 17 of 17 Negro men and a white woman outside a night spot. Demonstrations led to widescale arrests last weekend. Police Chief John Lyons has been ordered by the police commission to investigate the charges of brutality, but there has been no persistent demand for a civilian review board, as such.

Despite weekend riots also in Chicago, there is no civilian review board there and the city's 21-year-old Commission on Human Relations says there has been no pressure for one.

Detroit, scene of a 1948 race riot that claimed 34 lives, has a citizens complaint bureau within the police department to review all cases where a citizen is shot by a police officer. Police Commissioner Ray Girardin and Mayor Jerome Cavanagh claim police relations with the Negro community are good and have rejected pressure for a civilian review board. However, the Rev. James Wadsworth, NAACP branch president in Detroit, disagrees, and declares:

"The Negroes in Detroit feel they are part of an occupied country. The Negroes have no rights which the police have to respect. It appears that the average patrolman looks upon the Negro as being a criminal type."

Rejected

St. Louis police have rejected a civilian review board, but carefully check each charge of police brutality. Recently a Negro burglar was shot to death but investigation disclosed that the fatal bullet glanced off a brick wall before hitting him in the head. The police officer involved was cleared by the department and a coroner's jury.

Pittsburgh has a civilian commission which investigates and makes recommendations on charges of police brutality, but it has no formal power. Two policemen currently are awaiting departmental charges there of roughing up a woman whose son killed one policeman and wounded two others in a gun battle July 6.

The Cincinnati City Council rejected a civil rights demand for a civilian review board about 18 months ago. However, a human relations commission has been set up to hear complaints of police brutality, although it has no power of review.

During the Danville, Va., racial unrest in 1963, the city council turned down proposals for a civilian review board. With the stepped up pace of racial integration there, the issue apparently has subsided.

Negro demands for a civilian review board in Baltimore were met by the establishment last week of a complaint evaluation board, which, however, has only advisory powers in police brutality cases. It is made up of state, city and police department officials, and has drawn criticism from Negro, civic and ministers' groups.

The president of the Columbus, Ohio, NAACP chapter, the Rev. Thele D. Hill, said there is no present proposal there for a civilian review board. He speaks of "fine cooperation with the Columbus police department." Police Chief George Scholer says there are frequent charges of police brutality, but adds "This is part of a policeman's way of life."

Denver's minority groups have complained from time to time of police brutality and the complaints have been referred to a commission which can investigate but has no authority to hold hearings.

Requests

There have been a number of requests by Cleveland civil rights groups for a review board, but Ruth Turner, executive secretary of the Cleveland branch of the Congress of Racial Equality, says they "fell on deaf ears." City Safety Director John McCormick says such a board is unnecessary.

At Forrest City, Ark., a committee seeks statewide action against civilian review boards, claiming they are easily infiltrated by Communists wishing to intimidate effective police work.

The NAACP wants a review board in San Francisco, and the police don't. It is not a burning issue, however.

Mercer Tate, chairman of the Philadelphia Police Advisory Board, said less than half of the cases which come before him have to do with alleged police brutality—with the others including "other violations of citizens' rights."

"No single group is a panacea," Tate said, but he considers his board a definite factor in controlling unnecessary force by police.

FEMININE HOBBY

BANDUNG, Indonesia (UPI) —A court praised a 43-year-old man Friday for divorcing six of his 12 wives, but warned him to get rid of at least two more if he wants to stay out of trouble with the law. Based on Moslem tradition, Indonesian law allows a man four wives. The defendant, who kept all 12 of his wives in the same house, explained to the judge marriage is "my hobby."

BOOKS

Description And Mood Overdone

IN THE SUN. By Jon Godden. Knopf. $4.95.

Miss Godden's specialty is the novel in which a small number of characters confront each other in a highly embroidered context. She writes women's stories. They are filled with too much cultural polish to be called soap operas, but they ain't virile.

Her current effort is well done within those limitations.

This is a story set in a Mediterranean villa. At the beginning a middle-aged spinster named Janey is lazing away her days on a soft inheritance. Behind her are some unpleasant episodes in England.

For one thing, her father had died of a fall, and if Janey had given him an impulsive push she really hadn't meant it. And after the family wealth had gone solely to her elder sister Meg, who became extremely ill, Janey hadn't meant to say the bitter words that drove poor Meg to suicide.

Suddenly there appears on this idyllic sun-scene at the villa a nephew of Janey's named Michael. He is a post-juvenile delinquent with a history of small embezzlement. His suave purpose is blackmail — and if that doesn't work, a sly erasure of Janey, for money's sake.

The scene in which the disgusting Michael puts the heat on Janey is too artificially contrived. Janey's subsequent confusion takes on the aspect of plain female stupidity, despite the flowery words about it. Michael and the other males in the narrative just aren't believable.

Miss Godden has a strong gift for description and mood, which she overdoes with abandon. She writes beautiful prose about the continental atmosphere — and it is vaporously feminine. Women may swoon over this sort of fashionable dreaming; male readers are likely to rush out of the house in quest of a bloody steak and a slug of gin.

History In Color Stereo Is Described

AVIGNON IN FLOWER, 1309-1403. By Marzieh Gail. Houghton Mifflin. $6.

Mrs. Gail has plucked the strings of a modern lute to summon right out of a late medieval tapestry all the exotic figures of an era as tense with change as our own.

This is the story of the seven French popes who, for most of the 14th Century, maintained the Holy See in Avignon, while Rome fell into ruins. It was the time of the worldly Western Church's Great Schism, which as no one could foresee then, would lead straight to Martin Luther.

Historian Toynbee In New Outpost

BETWEEN NIGER AND NILE. By Arnold J. Toynbee. Oxford U. Press. $3.75.

Historian Toynbee describes in these pages a nine-week trip through upper and middle Africa.

Even this erudite scholar, found some personal excitations as a tourist — whether from seeing hippos chomp on papyrus plants and water hyacinths, or men in white toags at a remote spot, or 6-feet-6 Nilotic blacks.

But the book is only incidentally a travelogue. The author's circuit was from Morocco to Nigeria, the Sudan, Ethiopia, the United Arab Republic (Egypt), Cyrenaica and Tripolitania.

His viewpoint is that post-colonial Africa is faced with several divisions — North and South, Arab and Negro, Muslim and Christian.

Particularly in Nigeria and the Sudan he observed the North-South differences. He found that although most of Africa's Arabs are Muslims and many of the Negroes are recent Christians, there are paradoxes — the Northerners of Nigeria and the Sudan are predominantly Negroes, Muslims speaking Arabic.

Toynbee has several references to Egypt's Nasser as a wise humanitarian in his attitudes toward the Arab problem; not all readers will go along. And the author's tour did not include an African hot-spot, the Congo.

He concludes that perhaps Ethiopia may succeed in "maintaining a lofty position above the battle" and serve as a key to the Arab-Negro confrontation.

Anthropologist Excellent Writer

THE HIGH VALLEY. By Kenneth E. Read. Scribners. $6.95.

Read spent nearly two years, starting in 1950, in the central highlands of New Guinea. At that time civilization was just beginning to change the hereditary way of life among the Gahuku tribes of the high valley where he lived.

The author was there as a social anthropologist. But don't let that fact frighten you away from this book; it is not a professional report filled with footnotes, but a personal record. And this anthropologist is a marvelous writer.

Essentially it is an account of Read's attempts to bridge the gap between the civilized mind and the primitive (Stone Age) mind. That is a psychological impossibility, as Read soon discovered; but he plunged so deeply into the mental and emotional factors of his work that he finally departed from the valley with a bleeding ulcer.

Read studied life in the raw — and some of it was repulsive — in a little settlement called Susuroka, a place of 13 huts. He was interested not only in social patterns, beliefs not only in social patterns, mores, pubery rites, courting, divorce and other sociological data, but also the beauty of the land, the food, the weather and the effects of the white man's encroachment.

He presents a character study of Makis, the settlement's founder, that is a polished profile-in-depth. There are other studies of a teen-age boy, a very young girl, a gang of youths who worked for him from time to time, and a minor tribal politician.

One chapter relates the negotiations for the young girl's betrothal, the marriage payments, her ceremonial departure from the village and her tranfer to her husband's village. It is a tremendously exciting piece of description, worthy of a master writer.

Read is a keen observer and skilled reporter of a strange world, and has produced a stimulating book.

Collection Exhibits Insight

THE SUSPENDED DRAWING ROOM. By S. N. Behrman. Stein & Day. $6.

As a writer of profiles, Behrman is at his best when dealing with the idiosyncratic genius. It is interesting that several of his subjects in this collection are geniuses of yesteryear.

For example, his story of Dr. Emanuel Libman — a diagnostician of almost miraculous intuitive powers — dates from 1939.

As he is primarily a playwright himself, Behrman was in a favored position to write his 1940 sketch of dramatist Robert E. Sherwood and his 1946 piece on Ferenc Molnar.

Mint To Strike New Type Coin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of the new coins with a reduced silver content or none at all will be struck at the Philadelphia Mint Monday, the White House said Saturday.

Mining of 25-cent pieces will start at 10:30 a.m.

The new half dollar will go into production at the Denver Mint by Nov. 1 and production of the new dime will start by Dec. 15, possibly at both mints.

The coins won't go into circulation until large supplies are on hand, and production of existing silver coins will continue —at an even higher rate in the case of dimes and quarters— until supplies of new coins are ample.

Existing silver coins are 90 per cent silver. The new quarter and dime will have no more silver in them but will be made of a sandwich of a copper core covered by the same alloy of copper and nickel used in five-cent pieces. The new half dollar will have faces of 80 per cent silver and 20 per cent copper bonded to a core of 79 per cent copper and 21 per cent silver.

The silver dollar will remain 90 per cent silver but the new coinage law forbids producing any for five years.

The law also authorizes putting the San Francisco assay office into business as a mint on a temporary basis and it will turn out pennies starting Sept. 1. The San Francisco Mint was closed in 1955.

Head Start Program Will Be Year Round

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Headstart project launched this summer to prepare underprivileged children for school will become a year-round operation under plans confirmed Saturday.

Headstart directors around the country, who enrolled 600,000 pre-school aged children for summer training, got the word this week in letters from Sargent Shriver, poverty war chief, and Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel.

A Shriver aide confirmed that the longer term planning is based upon expected congressional approval of anti-poverty and school aid appropriations.

House and Senate have approved differing amounts for the poverty program, but both more than double funds available during the first year of the campaign. Both versions provide for "child development centers," another name for Project Headstart.

The $1.3 billion school aid appropriation, which Congress is expected to pass before adjournment, would provide another source of funds to give young children the social, nutritional and medical preparation to take advantage of later formal schooling.

Rusk Remains The Silent Secretary Of State

Each Secretary of State prefers to run his office in his own way. Dean Rusk's way is silence. Here is a view of Secretary Rusk.

Monroe Morning World
Sunday Features
Editorials — Spotlight — Sports
Monroe, La., August 22, 1965 1-B

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Each man who holds the job of secretary of state, Dean Rusk once said, must work it his own way.

For better or worse he has worked it his way, in silence when possible, moving, by choice, behind the scenes of the White House and State Department, avoiding public controversy when he could.

Yet, after four and a half years in office, and despite his prudence, he has now become a figure in public dispute.

But it is a dispute with a strange twist. Other secretaries of state in modern times have been assailed for the policies they advocated, but Rusk has been criticized increasingly because his critics said they did not know what he stood for. The criticism, moreover, has been a muted mixture of fault-finding and praise so that Rusk's success in avoiding the posture of the embattled hero remains unbroken.

RUMORS THAT Secretary of State Dean Rusk (left) might be named ambassador to the United Nations were squelched when Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg (right) replaced the late Adlai Stevenson. The two are seen with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey at the White House in Washington during recent conferences on Viet Nam. President Johnson strongly supported his often criticized secretary of state. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

These aspects of the controversy are not surprising in his case. He does not make bitter enemies, just as he does not make intimate friends. He is a middle-way man in policy and a combination of scholar, soldier, and organization man in experience. Above all, he is a nonpolitician. He does not have the political instinct for capturing public attention, destroying an antagonist, building personal power.

"I'm never in competition with my colleagues in the department," Rusk said once when asked privately why other people seemed to make major policy speeches while he stayed in the background.

Another time, talking about his efforts to decentralize authority and encourage assistant secretaries to run their sections of the State Department with semi-independence, Rusk said: "I've never complained to any of my colleagues about exceeding their responsibility."

On another aspect of the same issue of his personal interest in command and control, Rusk also said: "The problem in government is not a struggle for power. It is a struggle to avoid responsibility."

This is perhaps the most revealing comment he has ever made so far as it illuminates the limits on his own concept of what government is.

Because of his passion for all the anonymity his globally prominent job will permit, Rusk's policy stands have in many instances been publicly unclear or simply unknown. So far as can be determined by outsiders his actual stand in some critical situations has been unclear inside the government. But it is also true that it has on many occasions been much more definite than his public position and public statements indicated.

Rusk's persistence in sticking to the middle of the road, plus his reputation for intelligence, integrity and industry, have however, combined to make him a political asset to President John F. Kennedy and to President Johnson in ways the politicians in the first year did not foresee.

Rusk had maintained the best relations with congressional leaders and committees of any secretary of state since the end of World War II, apparently because he has impressed the members as being fair and candid in talks with them and generally prudent in his handling of foreign relations. A word frequently used to describe him is "solid."

As much as Rusk's reputation may depend on a lack of sharply defined public stands on great issues, it is nevertheless true that more is known about his position on a variety of questions than he himself trumpets from the State Department. Most of the time when Rusk takes a position he manages to make it appear old and familiar or expressed in such general principles that it has the appearance of a cliche of diplomacy. He abhors the sensational and avoids the dramatic whenever possible.

The war in Viet Nam has been called for several years — by oppositionists — "McNamara's war" after Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara. It might with greater logic and historical accuracy be called Rusk's war. The secretary of state has been a strong advocate of opposing Communist aggression wherever it arose in areas of importance to the United States and when the choice was open. It was known in the State Department in the summer of 1961 that Rusk, at a conference in Bangkok projected a very tough U.S. policy, including increased use of American forces in the defense of Southeast Asia. His stand was almost undercut while he was in Bangkok by a move by Undersecretary of State Chester Bowles to take the whole thing, subject to President Kennedy's decision, to the United Nations. Rusk indignantly stopped the maneuver but he never gave any public hint of what had happened.

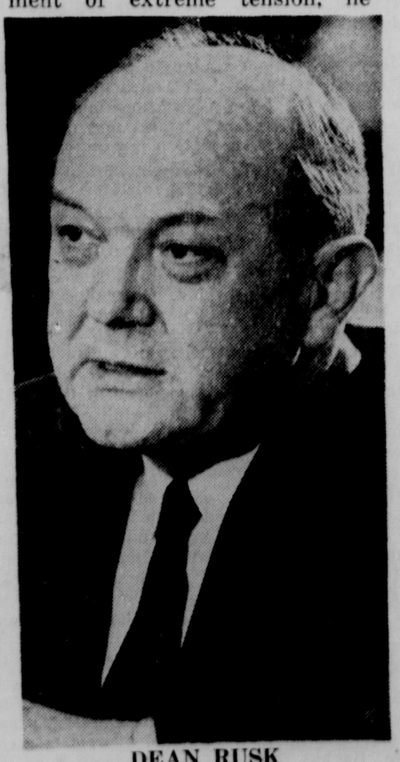
In the case of U.S. policies in Laos and South Viet Nam, a long-time associate of Rusk says, "it was never a case of his getting on the bandwagon after a presidential decision was made. He was the original advocate of action. He once said that he had been through all the similar situations in the past — the threats to Greece, Iran, Korea and all others. He became convinced long ago that the only way to deal with Communist aggression is to meet it where it arises."

On the other hand, Rusk's participation or lack of it in two of the greatest crises of recent years have contributed to much of the criticism about him. Both of these concern Cuba.

In the first instance in the spring of 1961, shortly after he had taken office, President Kennedy had to decide whether to allow U.S. trained, financed and supported Cuban refugees to invade and try to overthrow Fidel Castro's government. The evidence publicly available is that Rusk did not like the operation but never made a fight against it and in the end went along with the President's decision to approve it. Now he has been severely criticized for failure in this instance to stand up for what he believed.

In October 1962, when President Kennedy had to decide how to get Soviet nuclear missiles out of Cuba, Kennedy and a circle of advisers split between strong action advocates and those who counseled a cautious approach — popularly labeled the "doves" and the "hawks."

In the aftermath of the Kennedy victory over Premier Nikita Khrushchev in the great showdown, Rusk generally was credited with making only one contribution. At a critical moment of extreme tension, he summed up the situation by saying: "We're standing eyeball to eyeball, and the other fellow just blinked." He had in fact sensed that Khrushchev was beginning to back down.



DEAN RUSK
. . . Answers Query

Criticism over his role in the missile crisis angered Rusk to the point that he heatedly defended it in talks with newsmen on one or two occasions. He said the responsibility of the secretary of state was to advise the President and he did not think he should commit himself before all the facts were in. Therefore he withdrew from the argument for several days though Undersecretary of State George Ball, instructed by Rusk to take a free hand, presented the State Department viewpoint. In the end Rusk and McNamara recommended the course which the President used to force the nuclear weapons out of Cuba — a limited blockade of the island.

In Washington now there is a persistent undercurrent of speculation about how long the 56-year-old Rusk will continue to serve as Johnson's top foreign policy advisor. White House intimates say that so far attacks on Rusk merely hardened Johnson's support.

Yet Rusk's friends believe he probably will not serve out the full term of his administration unless Johnson urgently insists. Last fall at election time, Johnson asked him to remain and Rusk agreed. But it was understood then that Rusk planned to hold the job only for a year or so.

Born of a poor family in Georgia and educated here and abroad by his own hard work and scholarships, Rusk is not a wealthy man as so many secretaries of state have been. As head of the Rockefeller Foundation in the 1950s he may have made as high as $70,000 a year; officials say the expense of his job now exceeds his $35,000-a-year income.

"One point you have to remember about Dean," a friend in the government said recently, "is that's the way he feels his job ought to be run. Another thing — when he is criticized, he clams up. He just isn't interested in defending himself at the cost of disclosing information he feels should not be disclosed."

Inside the government, Rusk's position was more difficult during his first year of office than it appears to be now. He was never one of the "in" group of New Frontiersmen around President Kennedy. His cautious and contemplative temperament did not mesh with their energetic style.

Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., a member of the Kennedy "in" group, reflects that view and gives his version of Kennedy's thoughts about Rusk in his book, "A Thousand Days: John F. Kennedy in the White House." Schlesinger says the State Department under Rusk puzzled and frustrated Kennedy and that Kennedy decided to replace Rusk after the 1964 election.

"Rusk was a superb technician," Schlesinger writes. "This was his power and his problem. He had trained himself all his life to be the ideal chief of staff, the perfect No. 2 man. But the inscrutability which made him a good aide and a gifted negotiator made him also a baffling leader.

"Since his subordinates did not know what he thought, they could not do what he wanted. He had authority, but not command."

Rusk at first let the Schlesinger account pass without comment. In a private meeting a few days later, however, when he was asked a question he did not want to answer, he quipped: "I think (that to make any reply) I'd have to retreat into the platitudes for which I have been recently criticized."

Then later, at a news conference, Rusk made it publicly clear that he disapproved of the too early disclosure of confidences by Schlesinger and other Kennedy associates. His own memoirs, Rusk said, will not be published until the presidential papers concerning the same period become public.

"My associates in government and my colleagues abroad," said Rusk, "can rest on the assurance that when they deal with me on the basis of confidence, that confidence will be respected."

"It is the purpose of the Department of State," Rusk went on, "to try to bring about what some people will call a boring situation; that is, a period of peace." This was Rusk's dry rejoinder to another Schlesinger statement, that Rusk had once said "a great deal of our work is perhaps on the boring side."

The Schlesinger criticism, printed in Life magazine as an excerpt from his forthcoming book, made a bigger impact than usual because it came in the midst of speculation that Johnson was thinking of replacing Rusk.

Then there were actions by senators, including the Republican leader, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, known as a close associate of President Johnson in supporting the U.S.-Vietnamese policy. When Adlai Stevenson died suddenly in London, Dirksen told newsmen Rusk might be sent as ambassador to the United Nations and McNamara might become secretary of state. Some thought Dirksen was trying to make it appear that it would be a promotion to step down from the State Department to be an ambassador.

Land Of Morning Calm Is Nearing Its Rebirth

By ROBERT EUNSON

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—Tomorrow is almost here, in the Land of the Morning Calm.

After nearly 40 years of occupation by Japan, five years of fighting off a Communist invasion and a decade of scrambling up out of the rubble, the Korean people are beginning to live. Children play in the streets. Pretty girls look up at the sun and smile.

"I feel our economy now is in the take-off stage," says President Chung Hee Park.

"Korea is now being reborn, taking its place in the modern world," states Joel Bernstein, U.S. aid director.

"I am optimistic," declares U.S. Ambassador Charles Brown.

"Don't look around you and say this is Korea today," grinned Deputy Prime Minister Chang Key Young. "This is Korea tomorrow."

Chang, like so many other Korean leaders, has seen his country occupied, invaded and bloodied so many times that he admits to being a little amazed as well as happy about the sudden change in atmosphere, economically.

Indicators of progress, over the past ten years, are these:

The gross national product is up 62 per cent.

Industrial production up 251 per cent.

Hydroelectric power up 46 per cent; thermal up 1,341 per cent.

Exports up 391 per cent.

Nation's budget up 431 per cent.

National wholesale price index up 491 per cent.

In matters directly affecting the man in the street, there are now 5,243 hospitals compared with 2,585 in 1955 — up 103 per cent; 5,929,000 students to 3,386,000 in 1955 — up 75 per cent and 6,984 schools compared to 5,425 in 1955, up 29 per cent.

Oh yes, there are 179,574 telephones to answer now, or a 454 per cent greater chance of getting the wrong number than in 1955.

And you have to dodge 5,474 taxis on the streets of Seoul, instead of the 1,989 they had in 1955, or 175 per cent more taxi drivers zipping past you on a rainy night.

Speaking of rain, a long period of drought that threatened disaster for farmers ended last month with downpours that brought floods to large parts of the country. As a result, the forecast is for an average rice harvest, about 15 per cent less than the 1965 target.

President Park's government recently signed a treaty with Japan normalizing relations between the two countries for the first time in 60 years.

"Korea has not only recovered from the war damage the president said, "but also the Korean economy is showing remarkable progress in many aspects, mainly owing to the generous aid provided by the United States and other friendly nations."

United States aid to Korea in the past 15 years totals about $4.5 billion.

Korea was divided along the 38th parallel at the end of World War II, with the Communists getting the north.

Not much had been accomplished towards an economy when, on a June morning in 1950, North Korean divisions smashed into South Korea.

During the next three years the country was a battleground between the Chinese and North Korean Communists backed by Russia, and the United Nations, led by the United States.

The armistice was signed 12 years ago, bringing an end to fighting but not the war. President Syngman Rhee's government tried to revitalize the nation's economy with U.S. help, but the major problem was that the factories and electrical power plants along the Yalu River were all in the hands of the Communists.

Unrest and weariness overcame the populace. A student revolution overthrew Rhee in 1960, charging the last elections had been a fraud. This was followed a year later by a coup which brought a military junta to power.

Gen. Park emerged as the "strong man," a title he has since outgrown. Two years ago Park ran for office and his party was brought to power legally

Though there is still desire for unification with North Korea, Park believes his country must succeed alone.

Park will not agree to reunification unless it is done on the basis of free elections, supervised by the United Nations. The Communists won't buy this.

Park is presently facing his biggest political test — the treaty with Japan is up for ratification in the National Assembly.

His leading opponent is also named Park, but madame. Mrs. Park Soon-moon, 66, became head of the Minjung (Masses) party June 14 when all the groups opposing President Park's Democratic Republicans merged.

Mrs. Park commands 62 votes in the National Assembly against President Park's 110.

The Minjung group say they'll resign rather than vote for, or even against, a treaty with Japan.

Park, who has dodged more serious missiles in his life than political brickbats, doesn't believe they'll quite. He hopes to win ratification almost any day now.

Along with the normalization of relations with Japan, Korea is being studied by 35 large American firms who are considering taking advantage of the labor market.

MODERN APARTMENT houses like these are being built in Seoul by the Korean government to relieve the serious housing shortage. This development was put up after a coup in May, 1961, brought into power a military junta headed by "strong man" Chung Hee Park. Two years ago he was elected president. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Old Hand For Viet Nam

The new Lodge team in Viet Nam figures to benefit considerably by the return of a real letterman. He is Maj. Gen. Edward G. Lansdale, Ret., who joins the new ambassador shortly as head of a group of a dozen or more civilians who will attempt to bring a new approach to the war.

Lansdale is supposed to be the prototype of the colorful Col. Hillandale in The Ugly American. His nickname, "Over Hill and Lansdale," lends support to the general belief.

As a colonel, Lansdale made his reputation as an old Asia hand as adviser — and close friend — to Ramon Magsaysay, the Philippine national leader who rallied his people against the Communist Huks as defense secretary and went on to the presidency. The American colonel was officially a member of the Joint U. S. Military Advisory Group in the Philippines.

Lansdale went on to become an adviser — and a much prized one — to President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1954-56, in the shaky early days of the fated Diem regime. Subsequently he returned to spend unhappy days at a Pentagon desk as deputy special assistant on counter - insurgency to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

In his remarkably frank Mission in Torment, John M. Mecklin, the veteran correspondent who was U. S. public affairs officer in Viet Nam before and during Diem's downfall, says that Washington for "fuzzy reasons" vetoed suggestions by Ambassador Frederick E. Nolting Jr. and others that Lansdale be returned to Viet Nam. "High officials in Defense and CIA," writes Mecklin, "were down on Lansdale, one of the United States' ablest experts on counter-guerrilla operations, because of his tendency to break bureaucratic crockery to get things done."

As articulate as he is reticent, Lansdale spelled out some of his ideas for Viet Nam in a recent issue of Foreign Affairs. He proposed — greatly to simplify — a long and patient process of "American help in banding the leaders, the military, the civil servants and the people of Viet Nam into a united force for freedom."

Lansdale asserts that what the South Vietnamese need is a "great cause" such as the spirit of the British Magna Carta, the French "Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite," and our own Declaration of Independence. And he suggests that Americans help the people find that cause.

"The utmost urgent military need," wrote Gen. Lansdale, "is to make the number one priority for the military to protect and help the people." He pointed out that the Communist Viet Cong practice military action with severe penalties for misbehavior as part of their Military Oath of Honor, adopted from the "Three Rules and Eight Remarks" of Mao Tse-tung's Eighth Route Army. (When the Viet Cong actually encounters resistance, however, it is capable of the greatest cruelty against citizens as well as its military foes.)

Popularizing the war among the Vietnamese people would take much patience, much reorientation of the Viet Nam military — who have fired on civilians without cause — and much rethinking by American military and civilian advisers. It could go a long way, however, toward remaking an American image marred by tales of burned villages and indifference to the fate of the people who live in them.

And the reward could be great. As Gen. Lansdale put it 10 months ago, a "revolutionary appeal" might eventually "spread to the people of North Viet Nam, wounding communism at its most vital point — communism's control of the masses."

Flying Saucer Season

We seemingly are in the midst of the Flying Saucer season — and the reports continue to come in loud and clear.

The question is — what are the objects that so many people see, including a number in the Northeast Louisiana area.

Of course, there are a variety of opinions on the objects and officially the federal government tends to discount them as being anything unusual, although it has not been able to explain away some of them.

The perseid meteor "showers" occur annually in August. Emergence of the planet Jupiter and some bright stars, compounded by atmospheric conditions that produce a twinkling effect, has given rise to some of the recent sightings, according to the Air Force. Other atmospheric effects tend to fool radar outfits with false blips.

Reports of Unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs) have been coming in from Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, and Louisiana, which is par for the course. But this saucer season is something special. Further sightings have been reported in Nebraska, Minnesota, and Brazil. Waverly Root reports from France that a farmer of Valensole, Basses - Alpes aroused so much curiosity over the landing of a mysterious engine that his lavender crop was trampled by crowds to a total loss.

Probably the latest report comes from Hershey, Pa. A young amateur photographer says he actually photographed the strange sky phenomenon on June 30, but didn't show his photos to the press until August 5. "I felt everyone might think I was some kind of a nut," he says.

The procedure in the Hershey manifestation was fairly standard. The photographer was interviewed by a representative of the National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena and later by Maj. Donald Keyhoe, director of NICAP, which headquarters in Washington.

Keyhoe, a confirmed saucerite, has written a number of books on the subject, including The Flying Saucer Conspiracy, the thesis of which is that the Air Force is lying about UFOs. The Major believes, in general, that there are such things as flying saucers and that they probably come from outer space. He told the Harrisburg Sunday Patriot - News that the Hershey photos would be subject to a series of tests. Presumably once the NICAP convinces itself of the authenticity of the photos, it will challenge the Air Force to explain them away.

Interplanetary travel is as old a dream as flight itself. As early as 100 A.D., Lucian of Samosata wrote the True History of a seagoing vessel which was blown to the moon by a storm. According to tradition, a Chinese named Wan Hoo rode a rocket vehicle about 1500 A.D. with unknown results. Wan Hoo fixed two large kites to a framework, attached 47 gunpowder rockets, and placed a saddle in the center. After he had been seated in the saddle, 47 torchbearers lighted the rockets and Wan Hoo disappeared.

Walter Sullivan in We Are Not Alone, probably one of the most serious books on the possibility of extraterrestial communication, cites Carl Sagan's paper presented to the American Rocket Society on Nov. 15, 1962. Sagan, says Sullivan, dismissed tales of flying saucers by noting that in the past few centuries, "when critical scholarship and nonsuperstitious reasoning have been fairly widespread," there had been no reliable reports of a visitation.

Sagan urged, however, that myths and legends be reexamined for indications that the earth may have been visited by strangers from space in the distant past. He also considered it "not out of the question" that relics of such visits may be found and suggested that a hidden base may be discovered, perhaps on the far side of the moon, placed there to provide continuity for succeeding expeditions.

Ah there, Wan Hoo.

A Way Of Life

Winnsboro, La.

To the Editor:

Since reading the editorial in today's paper I am led to wonder if todays' Negro has not in fact been terribly misused by others to gain power here in this country.

Where has the old-fashioned Negro disappeared to? Is he, as have some of the more beautiful of our birds and other life here in this state, about to become extinct? Even as recently as 20 years ago the Negro was one of the happiest of people. In the late afternoon especially in the fall of the year you could hear them humming or singing, laughing and entirely enjoying himself. In fact, I've heard landowners say that his labor was not working unless there was laughing and singing.

What has brought on this great change in the colored population of our state as well as in other states? Could it be that in our effort to educate, equalize and in general, change the Negro we are guilty of breaking the spirit of our once happy race of people? Could it be that they do not, deep down in their hearts, want all this change we are making ourselves believe they want? Is it possible that the Negro wants only to be given a chance to educate himself if he wants to in schools with the same standards as the white schools. Go to church in his own church and worship God in his own way.

Is the truly happy Negro a thing of the past never to return, as is the horse and buggy? Has a once gay, happy race of our citizens become extinct?

Are we guilty of something far worse than inciting riots? And that is the crime of slowly throttling a way of life.

Reason For Riots

Mer Rouge, La.

To The Editor:

What is wrong with our country when a President like Eisenhower can send the Army into Little Rock in direct violation of the Constitutional rights of the state of Arkansas?

What is wrong with our country when a President like Kennedy can send the Army into the campus of Ole Miss in direct violation of the Constitutional rights of the state of Mississippi?

What is wrong with our country when a President like Johnson can send the Army into Selma - Montgomery in direct violation of the Constitutional rights of the state of Alabama?

And why did Johnson not see fit to send the Army down to Bogalusa in direct violation of the Constitutional rights of the state of Louisiana? Was his presence so great that he could divine the lack of danger in letting the state handle its own trouble? Where was that presence lurking when the race riots kicked up in Los Angeles, New York and other racial hot spots up in Negro heaven?

Now Johnson is sending his envoy to Los Angeles to iron out the trouble and to find the reason for the unrest of the Negroes. The reason of the unrest should be seen from the White House as it had its origin right there. The real reason is that the Negro has a justifiable inferiority complex that has been churned by the Communist. They have caused the Negro to shame because he is a Negro.

What is wrong with our country?

Recall Beatniks

Gonzales, La.

To the Editor:

(The following letter was sent to Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown of California and a copy sent to this newspaper for publication.)

Dear Governor:

It is regretted that the rioting in Los Angeles has taken place at a time that you were short of some of your most active civil rights workers.

However we no longer require the assistance of these beatniks that have been sent from state universities to attempt to handle the affairs of the state of Louisiana, we never did need them and it is suggested that you and the other officials of the state of California recall these beatniks to aid you and your state at this adverse time.

We made a futile attempt to educate some of the more intelligent of these beatniks the remainder was considered incompetent of education according to our standards.

The purpose of these beatniks, we're told, is to aid in civil rights. Governor, if any state was ever in need of aid in this field it seems that Californnia is one of them.

Prejudice Legal

Delhi, La.

To the Editor:

No American Negro has the right, under the laws of our land, to seek to force himself upon a congregation of white Christians who do not invite or welcome his membership among them. "The struggle for first class citizenship is not a struggle for so-called race mixing. The mixing, or better still, the fellowship among peoples of difference groups and races must always remain a matter of personal choice and group preference.

In a democracy like ours the law never dictates who shall be your companion, your friend, your associate and your house guest. The truth is, under our form of government it is no legal offense to practice racial prejudice. There is no law on the statute book of the United States of America that can prohibit one man from thinking he is better than another and from feeling he has the right to discriminate against other races so long as said practice is restricted to the field of private associations, clubs, and fraternities." It is not legally wrong until a person attempts to have his prejudices condoned by law and supported by the government.

The struggle for first class citizenship does not involve the right to worship in a church that has traditional racial segregation or discrimination. Under the laws of our land churches may, if they will or wish, draw the line as to who shall be members and who shall not be. "The ones who seek membership for racial reasons are just as unchristian as those who deny him membership for racial reasons."

It's both unchristian and unfair to seek to force ourselves upon others and to enjoy the fruits of their sacrifices and labor without a willingness to pay the price.

Richness In Life

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

A person can have richness in his life every day and I like to mention some of them.

First: To be kind and have a smile, instead of a frown, to show respect for your fellowman in every way you can, whether in a business transaction or a social affair.

Second: To have time for people who have had sorrow, sickness or trouble in their families and to take time out from what you are doing and to be of service to them.

Third: To be courteous and kind to old and crippled people. Today, this generation doesn't have any time for their elders and cripples. But if they live long enough, they might want to be shown some courtesy when they get older.

Fourth: Have time for God and be holy and devoted to his teachings and His ways — the way He wants us to live.

Fifth: To be decent and face the world and be able to look up to it for honesty, goodness and uprightness.

Lastly: This is the favorite one and perhaps the one that causes lots of trouble in families. Money — and how some folks love it. Effects it has on you, how much you can make to get rich, how much you will save for a rainy day or how much you can spend and enjoy yourself.

All these richnesses, especially the first five, will be blessings upon you during your life through God's love.

Leonard D. Lemle

Socialist Society

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

(The following letter was sent to Sen. Russell Long and a copy sent to this newspaper for publication.)

Dear Senator Long:

I am disturbed and disheartened at the headlong dash America is making towards a socialist society. Whether it be in the name of the New Deal, New Frontier or Great Society makes no difference, the end results are likely to be the same if the present trend continues.

It seems like some elected officials are so power crazed and so anxious to do the bidding of the chief executive that they apparently don't allow their conscience to play any part in deciding in the best interest of America when judging the nature of a bill. The order of the day is to please L.B.J.

Senator Long, I mailed you a petition back in October 1964 with many signatures of individuals in Northeast Louisiana who weren't exactly pleased with the position you took in supporting the Johnson administration over the protest and pleas that you support the man of Louisiana's choice. Certainly, it was your right to support the man of your choice and perhaps I'm wrong in thinking that an elected official should conform to the will of the electorate. Perhaps I'm also wrong in thinking he is in Washington to represent and endeavor to carry out the wishes of the people in his home state. If I am, I have been terribly mislead. However, what's done is done. The task at hand is of great importance. By that I mean the defeat of a number of the administration bills. I take this liberty to plead with your better judgment to weigh the bills in the balance of your own heart and conscience, whether their passage is in the best interest of America, or the most pleasing to the president.

The following are bills that I urge you to voice your opposition to: for the sake of America and freedom.

United States Senate

(1) S.256 — Let us not be forced to join unions in order to make an honest living. Let unions be attractive enough to attract it's membership.

(2) S.500 — Let us not open our gates to the hordes of Asiatics and other nationalities. Let us retain the McCarran-Walter act with it's Asiatic Pacific Triangle provisions.

Senator Long, you no doubt know of the AP article "H.H.H. Pushing 2 Top Bills" Morning World, July 18, and of the pressure and out-right threats applied to new Democratic members of the House. He has told them if they want to win again in 66 they had better conform and support all of the socialistic bills that come before them. They are being told that they will get this, (namely the farm bill) only if they do that, (cooperate in the repeal of Section every one in line, Humphrey has organized teams to pressure the 14(b). In an effort to brow beat members and report to him periodically.

Senator Long, what is happening to the democratic principle in America? Has it become "old hat" for a man in politics to vote his own convictions? God forbid, for if that is true we are nearer to a one party rule and ultimately a dictatorship than we realize.

Humphrey also tells them that it is best they shouldn't comment on certain issues unless they can say something in support of the president's course. Now I ask you Senator, is this what we call a free society? Is that a fitting example for the leadership of this great nation? Do they tell you what to say and not to say? What to vote for and what not to vote for?

I notice the anti gun pressure is on now, which is another attact on freedom, so far you are uncommitted on the matter. Senator Ellender and Congressman Passman have spoken out against it. I remind you again Senator Long, the eyes of North Louisiana are upon you. You must either represent the people of North Louisiana or the Johnson administration. You may be sure you cannot represent both. I would appreciate a reply from you explaining your position in these matters.

BARRY GOLDWATER

Too Many Makers Of Viet Nam Policy

IT IS UNDERSTANDABLE if the Communists show no inclination to negotiate for peace in Viet Nam. They must be as confused about U.S. terms and purposes as some Americans are. Unfortunately, those who are most confused seem to work at the White House, the Defense Department or the State Department.

In fairly rapid succession, gentlemen on those various payrolls have said we are at war, we aren't at war; we want to win, we want only to phase out the fighting; there will be no privileged sanctuary for the enemy, there will be at least one major privileged sanctuary.

Those are just the major contradictions of administration policy regarding Viet Nam. Every day there are minor ones in addition. The contradictory statements about whether we have or have not adequate equipment in the battle area would make a medium-size book.

When an enemy which has already taken the measure of one major Western power — France — is faced with a policy disarray of that order, he may well be excused for carrying on the fighting. What's he got to lose? He can always pick his terms for stopping some time in the future. In the meantime he can score points.

This situation is far worse than the one which led to a stalemate in Korea. There at least some of the terms were clear; for instance, the independence of South Korea. In Viet Nam, who really knows? The President has spoken of a neutralized Viet Nam, with the door left wide open for Communist domination; others have spoken of U.N. elections, coalition governments — you name it.

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS is that everybody seems to have his own Viet Nam policy. If there is a national policy, it just has to get in line.

The President talks about winning a war. Most Americans, despite some shrill but minor discord, support him and admire him for that part of his stand.

Bill Moyers, his press secretary, however, acts more like one of the juvenile demonstrators parading in front of the White House. When Rep. Gerald Ford, House minority leader, reasonably suggested that the President should consider asking Congress for a declaration of war, if that is what we are fighting, Moyers snapped back with sophomoric, rude and disruptive sarcasm. He said he couldn't help it if some Republican wanted to go to war, thereby providing the sort of answer "peace sit-ins" cherish.

If he was reflecting the President's thinking, Mr. Johnson carefully has concealed this attitude so far. What does Moyers think we are doing in Viet Nam? Those are not peace corpsmen — those are Marines. They are not debating — they are dying.

Defense Secretary Robert McNamara feels free to make his own policies seemingly at will — and never mind the President. His latest policy decision, acting as deputy President for Vietnamese Affairs, is that we will pull out a few troops if the Communists will, and so forth until we just phase the war out, as neat as a bookkeeper's dream.

And then there is Averill Harriman, who has been as consistently connected with wrong decisions in Asia as any other present high-ranking employee of the administration. While Secretary Rusk apparently stands on his often repeated statement that there will be no privileged sanctuaries for the Communists — a lesson from Korea — Ambassador Harriman is busy assuring the Communists that Hanoi is going to be just that — a privileged sanctuary, safe from our attacks.

No wonder we're in trouble in Viet Nam. Just look at the confusion in Washington.

President To Visit Farm Areas In Fall

PRESIDENTIAL TRAVELING — No word comes from the White House as to its nature, but the expectation in Congress and elsewhere is that President Johnson will be scheduling some extensive travel ground the country when the legislators have departed from Capitol Hill. Congress has reached the clean-up stage and has the assurances of the President that he will submit no additional legislation. Since his inauguration in January the President has kept to an absolute minimum overnight stays outside of Washington other than jaunts to his ranch in Texas and to the Presidential retreat at Camp David, Maryland. A Presidential trip to the Western and Midwestern farms areas is a distinct possibility. Congress is now on the way toward enactment of a revised omnibus farm bill and the President is said to be anxious to talk about it and his goals for the future of agriculture to farm audiences. At one time President Johnson was very hopeful of visiting in foreign countries this year, but the Viet Nam situation has made that impossible so far and still does although he has standing invitations in hand from some foreign chiefs of State.

GOVERNOR'S TERMS — Missouri's adoption Tuesday of a Constitutional amendment permitting a Governor to serve two 4-year terms leaves just 14 States which do not permit a Governor to succeed himself. Louisiana may be the next State to remove the bar. It will vote on a Constitutional amendment in November, 1966. Pennsylvania also talks of permitting a second 4-year term, but there is no prospect of immediate action there. As it is Governor William W. Scranton will not be eligible to make a race to succeed himself. There was once a tradition in most States that no Governor should serve longer than 4 years, in some a single 4-year term and in others two 2-year terms. In 26 States a Governor is permitted to stay in office for as many terms as the people will elect him. Governor Orval E. Faubus, of Arkansas who has been in office longer than any present Governor is serving his sixth 2-year term.

1965 REPUBLICAN RACES— Republicans now believe their best chance to win a big race this year is in New Jersey, where they think their Gubernatorial candidate, Wayne Dumont, is moving up on Democratic Governor Richard J. Hughes. In Virginia the G. O. P. is merely going through the motions in a Gubernatorial race where indications are that it will be swamped. Campaign of liberal Republican John V. Lindsay, who also carries the splinter Liberal party nomination, for New York City Mayor has hit the doldrums, could pick up again after the September 19th Democratic primary.

BUDGET — Administration's financial officials think the deficit for the current fiscal year will not go much, if any, above President Johnson's last January estimate of $5,300,000,000 despite the increased cost for men and material in Viet Nam and the new welfare programs. The economic surge is counted on to bring in more tax receipts that had been estimated. Republicans and conservative Democrats, however, talk of a big gap between receipts and expenditures. Senator A. Willis Robertson, Democrat, Virginia, estimates a deficit of $12,300,000,000. Record peace time deficit was $12,400,000,000 in the recession year of 1959. in the Eisenhower Administration.

SUNDAY POEM

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan that moves
To the pale realms of shade, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

OUR GOVERNMENT

While thumbing through a book the other day we came across a number of expressions by various Americans of old as to their idea on government and what America should stand for. We started listing them and came up with the conclusion that as a nation and a government we have drifted far afield. See what conclusion you reach:

1. The greatest glory of a freeborn people is to transmit that freedom to their children—William Harvard.

2. The people's government, made for the people, made by the people, and answerable to the people — Webster. (Is this still true?).

3. The principle of spending money to be paid by posterity, under the name of funding, is but swindling futurity on a large scale — Jefferson.

4. We sell our birthright whenever we sell our liberty for any price of gold or honor — Whipple.

5. Any government is free to the people where the laws rule and the people are a party to the laws. For liberty without obedience is confusion, but obedience without liberty is slavery — Penn.

6. The constitution in all its provision looks to an indestructible Union composed of indestructible.

7. Equal rights for all, special privileges for none—Jefferson.

8. The will of the people is the only legitimate foundation of any government, and to protect its free expression should be our first object — Jefferson.

9. I never use the word Nation in speaking of the United States. I always use the word Union or Confederacy. We are not a nation, but a union, a confederacy of equal and sovereign states — Calhoun.

10. The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts, bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or party — Calhoun.

11. There can be no fifty-fifty Americanism in this country. There is room here for only one-hundred per cent Americanism, only for those who are Americans and nothing else — Theodore Roosevelt.

Would you say the ideas expressed here are compatible to the "Great Society?"

INCOME AND TAXES

Ain't this something. One future aim of the administration is to find a way, or so it says, to guarantee every American family an annual income of $3,000. Meanwhile, the average American family pays about $3,300 per year in Taxes.

In some societies less sophisticated than ours this world lead to comments about over-taxation.

At any rate, we're interested in the proposition. We just wait until the plan is worked out.

A NEW BOOK

Have you read or seen the new book, "Encyclopedia of U. S. Government Benefits."

If you haven't, you've missed something. It explains how far the federal government has gone in its efforts to take care of American citizens' every need from the cradle to the grave. And it only cost $7.95. In their advertisements, publishers of the time say that the government is ready and willing to help you with your child's education, your vacation, home, your business success or any other problem. Just name it.

The current volume has over 1,000 pages with benefits listed from A to Z. It might be noted that with the present mood of President Johnson and Congress, this present, modest volume may well be expanded to a five-foot shelf of government books.

THE ANTI-POVERTY PROGRAM

A Twin Cities resident, recently got a good look at one phase of the administration's Anti-Poverty Program and he didn't like what he saw — particularly since he is a taxpayer.

Returning recently on a plane from Michigan, he became involved in a conversation with a flight companion. As it turned out, the youth was en route to a Youth Job Corps camp in Texas.

Seems the youth had given up a job to get into the Corps because of a friend. The youth was en route to the camp on an airplane at taxpayers expense. On him he had a card which told him to call a certain number which was listed collect in the event he was arrested for any reason.

I guess there's one thing you can say about the Great Society: It believes in going first class.

HIGH COURT PROBLEM

The U. S. Supreme Court has found itself in a difficult and unhappy predicament as a result of Negro demonstrations around the campus of Philadelphia's white-only Girard College.

The difficulty will be in extending to the Girard College demonstrators the gently understanding forgiveness the court has extended to demonstrators in other areas. Civil rights demonstrators arrested, jailed or fined for trespass or violence in the support of their cause generally have been found guiltless by the justices.

As a layman would understand it, the court usually has held that a civil rights demonstrator who violates local law by trespass or violence may not be punished because his cause is just. More precisely, the court could hold that state laws or local ordinances imposing racing discrimination violated the 14th amendment to the Constitution. The 14th guarantees all citizens equal protection under the law.

It would be reasonable to hold that no one should be punished for violating a law which was a violation of the Constitution. Last December the Supreme Court ruled in effect that the states may not prosecute for offenses in behalf of civil rights which were committed some years prior to enactment of the 1964 civil rights law.

The Girard College demonstrations have been going on for months, requiring hundreds of police to preserve order. There have been arrests for disorderly conduct. The college was founded 117 years ago with a bequest of $5.2 million from Stephen Girard, Philadelphia financier, who directed that the money be used to establish a preparatory of poor, white, male orphans to the age of 18. The endowment has increased greatly. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored people NAACP demands that Girard's will be revised after 117 years to educate Negro youths.

Girard's will has withstood many legal tests up to now, having gone twice to the Supreme Court. The first time up, the court held that the college could not exclude Negro boys because its trustees included municipal officers of Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Orphans' Court thereupon established new trustees, all private citizens. The Orphans' Court held that the governing factor in the dispute was the desire of Stephen Girard to limit his benefaction to white boys.

The NAACP refuses to accept that point of view despite the Supreme Court finding the second time around that the white-only provision was legal under the revised trusteeship.

Pennsylvania politicians from Gov. William Scranton down are maneuvering to break the will in an effort to get the NAACP off the back of Philadelphia.

Meantime, the demonstrators arrested at Girrard College are expected to take their cause to the Supreme Court. But in this instance any trespass or violence will have been committed in protest against an institution which the Supreme Court has said conformed to the law and to the Constitution. The court will require considerable ingenunity to extend gentile, understanding forgiveness here.

A FATHER'S PLEA

With school scheduled to open soon and a seeming increase in accidents and traffic deaths, we're reprinting here a plea that was passed on to us by a Twin Cities friend. Here it is:

Dear Driver:

A few weeks ago, I saw a little girl struck by a car as she tried to cross the street. I saw a father race toward her and hold her to him as she struggled in the agony of death. I saw all the plans that had been made for her dashed and I saw the look of despair that came over his face. I could only offer a prayer that such a thing might never happen again.

Today my daughter, who is six years old, started off to school. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is Scoot, watched her leave and whined his belief in the folly of education.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, a girl with yellow curls, and about the boy across the aisle who makes faces; about the teacher who has eyes in the back of her head; about the trees in the school yard and the big girl who does not believe in Santa Claus.

We talked about a lot of things — tremendously vital and unimportant things.

Now, as this is written, she is sound asleep with her doll "Paddy" in her arms.

When her doll gets broken or her finger gets cut or her head gets bumped, I can fix them. But when she starts across the street — then, Mr. Driver, she is in your hands.

Much as I wish I could, it's not possible for me to be with her all the time. I have to work to pay for her home, her clothes, her education.

So, Mr. Driver, please help me to look out for her. Please drive carefully. Please drive slowly past schools and at intersections. And please remember that sometimes children run from behind parked cars.

Please don't run over my little girl.

With deepest thanks for whatever you can do for her, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
FATHER

Twin Cities Week In Review

Scales Balanced In News Events

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

In considering major news events last week, the Twin Cities could be compared to a coin — one side bright and shiny, the other side dull and dingy.

The bright side of the coin symbolized the cheerful aspects of life, including progress and prosperity: initial plans for downtown modernization in Monroe and organization of a committee to study downtown modernization in Monroe and organization of a committee to study downtown needs of West Monroe; auction of 1965's first bale of cotton; industrial growth for the parish; and gala opening of the areas latest shopping extravaganza, the Mid-City Plaza.

The dull side of the coin represented more depressing events dealing with problems and penalties of society: mosquitoes plague; stains and odors haunting the southside of Monroe; high and uncomfortable temperatures and the usual number of traffic violations and other infractions of the law.

The scales were pretty well-balanced, and indicated the Twin Cities to be a normal community in the vast network Americana, where there is always the bad to go along with the good. In fact, the entire world of last week had similar symptoms of the constant attempt at mere survival. But, the world is like a giant wheel and it all seems to come round right in the end.

Outside Influence

Then there were certain events that took place last week which perhaps did not concern either side of the Twin Cities' coin, but, instead, caused it to stand on end. These local happenings were brought about by outside influence, namely, the federal government.

In once case, the outside influence was in the form of five federal "registrars," who began registering Negroes of Ouachita Parish Friday.

The team is not processing applicants to vote in elections at the parish courthouse, but the local post office building, which is, of course, federal property. Legal documents required in the parish registrar's office are for proof of age, residence and citizenship. The federal examiners require only that applicants swear that answers appearing beside these questions on their forms are true. Applicants seeking to become eligible to vote through the parish system are required to furnish three legal documents and then complete the forms; they are handled one at a time. The federal system allows several to take an oath at one time swearing information on the completed form is correct.

Another case of outside influence concerned the school systems of the Twin Cities and this came in the form of a two-headed monster — an integration suit and federal funds.

Education

A move was made by Dist. Atty. Albin P. Lassiter against a motion to move the Monroe school desegregation case from Federal Court at Shreveport to New Orleans. Attorneys, representing two local Negro school children seeking total integration of the Monroe city system by Sept. 7, filed the motion to move the case when a Shreveport judge declined to grant an injunction against the sale of $6 million in school bonds here.

In addition, local school officials confirmed Friday that they had been required by the U. S. Office of Education to advise the government by Aug. 31 whether they inted to comply with requirements in the Civil Rights Act for federal aid. Both superintendents of the city and parish systems had no reply to this ultimatum.

Brighter notes in the extremely important field of education: Northeast Louisiana College will receive $87,579 for student loans during the coming academic year under the national education act — in other words, federal funds; an addition to Richwood High School was approved by a Ouachita School Board inspection team, with another such inspection slated for Kiroli School Wednesday. And, — the parish school system expects an increase in enrollment of 400 - 600, while the city system reports gains expected between 300 - 400.

Industry Growth

Ouachita Parish was rated fourth in industrial growth of ten north Louisiana parishes from January through July, 1965. Industrial expansion in the parish totalled $1,457,620 for the period.

Cotton may no longer be considered king of this area, but the auction of the first bale grown in Ouachita Parish for the year always arouses a certain amount of nostalgia. Top bidder Thursday for the initial bale of the season was Jim Rivers who bid $1.60 a pound for the 425-pound "first." Huey Lenard was the prize bale's owner.

What could be dubbed "The Great Southside Mystery" — unsightly stains to houses and offensive odor to the air — was perhaps the dingiest section of the coin. Reports ranged from "plague continues, to causes believed found, to odor still remains." But, the City of Monroe and the Ouachita Parish Health Department were working hand-in-hand to remedy the situation and crews worked last week repairing a hole in an effort to relieve the nausea.

Hot Temperatures

Monday-95, Tuesday-96, Wednesday-97, Thursday-97, Friday-92. These were recordings of temperatures in the Twin Cities for the week, a period termed as "hottest of the year" by many residents. Oh, for a quick, cool drip — but, alas, four public swimming pools operated by the City of Monroe have been closed for the season — two weeks earlier than previously scheduled.

In between the faces of the coin were events of note: Monroe Chamber of Commerce President Howard Griffin suggested that Gov. McKeithen appoint new members to the Greater Ouachita Port Commission in an effort to revitalize the organization.

Deadline for registering for special election Sept. 28 is Friday. This election deals with all parish voters deciding about repairs and additions to the courthouse, and a rural fire protection system to be decided by voters outside the city limits.

Also on the dark side was the passing of prominent West Monroe businessman Fred Price Riser Sr. He was widely known in the area for his civic activities and as an Ouachita Parish School Board member from Ward 5.

The Police Jury of the parish accepted recommendations of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Commission for a one-day any deer season for Russell Sage area of the parish. The group also voted a plan to help alleviate and control the mosquito plague in the area. The salt-water, marsh mosquitoes were reported to be breeding in the Lake Tupawek Creek area of West Monroe. One juror said the mosquito plague was not confined to West Monroe, but had spread into Monroe.

Other Happenings

George W. Black has been appointed executive director of the Little Theatre of Monroe for the 1965-66 season.

The Monroe Utilities Commission granted its power plant employes a 10-cent hourly increase Thursday. The wage increase will be retroactive to July 1.

Volunteer workers were involved in sprucing up an old cemetery in Ouachita Parish which was established a century ago as a burial site for soldiers killed in the civil war.

The Smith Cemetery, off Old Natchitoches Road near West Monroe, is maintained on a non-profit basis by the families and friends of persons buried there.

The Ouachita Parish School Board last week approved new teachers for the system, a list of bus drivers, final plans for additions to the Ouachita Parish High School Athletic department, preliminary plans for classroom space and cafeteria at Union Baptist School, and approved a proposal for landscaping the school board offices grounds. Boundary lines for the schools in the system were also established by the board.

The World's Week In Focus

Wars, Conflicts In Review

By John Cale

UNFINISHED BUSINESS from a past war, the biggest battle in a new war and many-sided analyses of a disrupted United States community on the West Coast highlighted happenings of August's third week.

With World War II now an event of 20 years ago, a West German court convicted 17 Nazi agents for their part in the operation of Hitler's death camp at Auschwitz, Poland. Six of the defendents received life terms — maximum in West Germany since the death sentence was abolished in 1949. Eleven of the Auschwitz officials and workers received sentences ranging from three to 14 years. Three were acquitted.

Top Nazi extermination camp officials were tried and sentenced years ago, some as early as the Nuernberg War Crimes trials in 1945-46. The chief defendant in last week's convictions, following trials that lasted over a period of 20 months, was Wilhelm Boger, 55, a former sergeant. He was sentenced to life imprisonment 114 times for murder plus five years for aiding in murder.

THOSE WHO DIED at Auschwitz included Jews from the eastern European countries overrun by Hitler's armies as well as political prisoners of various nationalities. It was the largest of the Nazi death camps.

Open Conflict

WHILE THE COALS of a war already a quarter-century old still smoldered in a German courtroom, there was battlefield action in South Viet Nam — half way around the world.

Victors in the biggest American-Viet Cong battle of the war, U.S. Marines estimated more than 600 of the enemy were killed in the guerrillas' vain defense of Van Tuong peninsula entrenchments.

THE BODY COUNT reached 552, and all was quiet at nightfall.

Fifty prisoners were reported in Marine hands.

Maj. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, the Marine commander, said the air-sea attack launched by a regimental landing force Wednesday against a dug-in Red regiment on the peninsula was very successful.

"We accomplished our mission," Walt said.

However, even while Marines were mopping up that seaside battle zone 330 miles northeast of Saigon, other Viet Cong detachments scored twice against the government.

Striking by night, they overran the district town of Dak Sut and a nearby special forces camp of U.S.-advised Montagnard irregulars in the central highlands 290 miles north of Saigon. A spokesman said that, among those who fled the camp, eight Americans were spotted a mile to the south and picked up by helicopters.

OTHER GUERRILLAS, estimated to total two companies, inflicted heavy casualties in an attack on the hamlet of Vinh Hoa, nine miles west of Saigon. Briefing officers said the guerillas charged in after battering the hamelet with mortars, grenades and automatic weapons fire.

NEW SECURITY rules forbid the disclosure of totals of American dead, wounded and missing in any specific battle, on the ground that such information would be of value to the Viet Cong.

Los Angeles

SCATTERED VIOLENCE and bomb threats continued to interrupt an uneasy peace in Los Angeles' Watts community and elsewhere on the West Coast as the week drew to a close.

The official whose position places him nearest the heart of the disorder, Los Angeles Mayor Samuel Yorty, has indicated several factors behind the rioting. Some of his statements have indicated possible causes and motives for the outbreaks, while some have come in reply to charges from leaders and officials far from the scene.

Following a meeting with Negro leader Martin Luther King, Yorty branded the violence — which has at this writing claimed 36 lives — an "attack by Negroes on whites." The mayor flatly refused to consider removing Los Angeles police chief, William H. Parker.

IN ADDITION TO outlining a picture of race and unreason, Mayor Yorty was forced by assertions in Washington to answer charges relating to the spending of "anti-poverty" funds in his city.

It is easy enough for administration officials sitting far from the scene of an outbreak of violence to survey federal spending in various areas and affix the blame accordingly.

For example, Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity in addition to his job as head of the Peace Corps, told newsmen in the capital at mid-week that while he wanted "no feud with its mayor, the city of Los Angeles has not spent all the anti-poverty campaign funds it has received."

SHRIVER

On the other side of the argument, Yorty had previously sent a telegram to Senator George Murphy stating that Shriver's office had shut off certain funds.

Poverty Or Blood

WHILE ARGUMENTS could go on indefinitely as to the power of funds from Washington to create peace, harmony and prosperity in all quarters, there was the matter of the more immediate battle cry that touched off and sustained the clamity.

Martin Luther King, who stayed away from Los Angeles until National Guard units established a measure of peace, repeated allegations from jailed Negroes of "police brutality."

This catch phrase has been heard in hundreds of cities and towns over the nation, including at least three trouble spots in Louisiana.

Even as King uttered the slogan-charge in Los Angeles, the same theme surfaced in racially tense Springfield, Massachusetts, Chicago, Hartford, Connecticut, and elsewhere.

RIOTS, LIKE WARS, call for force in the immediate establishment of law and order. We feel Mayor Yorty, a Democrat by party preference, spoke well in this sense when he stood his ground after King's allegations against the Los Angeles police force:

"It is ridiculous for King to blame the police for the violence we had here. This is part of the technique of the 'big lie' and King, like others, has no evidence of police brutality."

Yorty accused King of trying to make Parker a "scapegoat" for five days and nights of rioting that left more than 1,000 injured and caused $175 million in property damage.

"There was no excuse to find fault in law enforcement for the riots and attacks on white people in this community," Yorty said. "It was an attack by Negroes on whites and not the police attacking the Negroes."

THE MAYOR ALSO accused Governor Edmund G. Brown of "trying to make political hay" out of the bloody disturbance.

Yorty's accusations came after Brown appealed for peace and cooperation and appointed a blue-ribbon commission headed by John A. McCone, former CIA director, to investigate the causes of the insurrection and recommend steps to prevent a recurrence.

AS BROWN MADE his appeal, store owners told police of threats by Negro men that their businesses would be bombed unless signs reading "blood brother" were posted before nightfall.

PERHAPS IT'S A broad, dim view of history that takes us from the outburst in Los Angeles to the week's sentencing of the Auschwitz workers for crimes committed more than 20 years ago.

But the element of conflict is common. And in both cases, the offenses against what we consider the side of humanity were symptoms rather than basic causes.

There is little doubt that Hitler's gas chambers were products of a totalitarian state — such things just don't get built with public funds set up by popular vote and congressional or parliamentary debate.

The lawlessness in Los Angeles, on the other hand, appears to be tied in with a movement that wants more centralized authority. Martin Luther King and other Negro leaders have denounced methods only — not ultimate goals of demonstrators and rioters over the nation.

YET THE WATTS community rioting came after significant legislation on civil rights, voting rights and poverty relief had been put into effect.

Such new pressures at this time cause us to wonder if there are not factions at work in our own country who would push onward toward some sort of ultra-centralized state.

More Peaceful

SINCE SPACE EXPLORATION in the United States still falls in the more peaceful, scientific category, the methodical preparations at Cape Kennedy for an eight-day endurance run afforded relief from reports of conflict and violence.

COOPER

Technical problems and a heavy thunderstorm Thursday resulted in a postponement of the Gemini 5 flight. But Saturday they were off in a beautiful shot.

Astronauts selected for the extended space trip were Charles Conrad and Gordon Cooper.

Earlier in the week, an unmanned Russian spacecraft reportedly photographed the back side of the moon. Tass, the Soviet news agency, published two pictures of the moon's hidden surface and distributed an article by Soviet scientist, Dr. Yuri Lipsky explaining what the photographs showed.

CONRAD

In a previous attempt in 1959 to photograph the side of the moon that constantly faces away from the earth, Russian pictures were considered to be poorly sketched fakes by many observers in this country and in Europe.

Seagoing Capsule

MORE DOWN-TO-EARTH in concept and expense than the spacegoing Gemini 5 craft, was Robert Manry's sailing craft, Tinkerbelle. Yet Manry revealed some of the daredevil courage of the early Atlantic flyers in completing a trip across that ocean in his 13½-foot boat last week.

The 48-year-old copy editor of the Cleveland, Ohio, Plain Dealer brought Tinkerbelle into Falmouth, England, after an exhausting 78-day solo crossing.

Manry, who learned to sail on Lake Erie, had set out on his 3,200-mile voyage from Falmouth, Mass. on June 1. He did not touch land until he stepped ashore here Tuesday night.

Manry had bought the 30-year-old boat for $250 in 1958 and spent another $600-700 to rebuild it for his epic journey. It was believed to be the smallest boat to ever make a West-East crossing of the Atlantic.

Among hundreds of telegrams and messages which greeted Manry was one from an Ohio congressman which said he was approaching President Johnson to ask him to invite Manry to the White House.

Back Down In UN

IT IS DIFFICULT for a true democratic republic to consider more than one major crisis at a time. Yet the very flexibility of this form of government has enabled it to cope with wars on several fronts and other conditions that have broken the backs of monarchies and dictatorships.

Last week, the Johnson administration, occupied with the war in Viet Nam and key legislation in Congress, wanted no crisis with the Soviet Union over payment of United Nations assessments. So we backed down in what could have been an issue over Article 19 of the U.N. Charter.

U.S. policymakers had moved toward this position for months. The dispute over the Soviet Union's back dues had the U.N. General Assembly in knots. One official explained: "The world situation is too dangerous to have an inactive assembly."

The decision, of course, was made by President Johnson. It was publicly stated Monday by Arthur J. Goldberg, new U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, in his maiden speech to the world organization.

This was one year to the day after the Communist world warned that the Soviet Union and its allies would walk out of the United Nations if they lost their votes in the General Assembly for being behind on peacekeeping assessments.

BUT THE RUSSIANS were willing to put up much more than the $108 million the whole communist bloc owes to the United Nations when it came to meat on the table and bread in the basket behind the iron curtain.

Massive Soviet gold sales are anticipated in the next few months to help pay for Russia's extensive purchases of wheat, made necessary by another bad harvest.

Russian gold sales may equal those necessitated by the grave wheat crisis of 1963 which reached the unprecedented sum of $900 million.

The Russian gold sold at the time helped the international gold pool, which accumulated a considerable buffer stock and enabled it to distribute some surplus to its central bank members. The pool is badly depleted at present.

Just how large expected Russian gold sales are likely to be was not certain, but preliminary estimates suggested they may be in the range of $700 million or more.

THERE WAS A SUGGESTION of good news on the U.S. side of the monetary struggle. Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler said last week this country had reported a balance of payments surplus of $248 million for the second quarter of the current calendar year.

FOWLER

However, the government cautioned American business against viewing the surplus as a final victory in President Johnson's program to reduce the balance of payments deficit. It urged strong efforts to continue the program.

The surplus was attributed not only to the President's program but also to a shipping strike which delayed exports from the first to the second quarters.

Opposed

SENATOR ALLEN J. ELLENDER, of Louisiana, reiterating his opposition to repeal of section 14 (B) of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, said if the repealer is passed it should include the "conscience clause."

Section 14 (B) of the labor act permits states to enact laws banning labor contracts which require union membership as a condition of employment.

Ellender said it appears that the repeal bill, already passed by the House, "likely will pass the Senate before adjournment" but that it would do so "without my vote."

He added he has received much mail concerning what is known as a "conscience clause" in the repeal legislation

"Some religious groups are concerned because their faith forbids the payment of dues or contributions to organizations outside their church," Ellender said.

Crippled Children Enjoy The Thrills Of Camping

The plodding tap of crutches, the soft whir of rolling wheelchairs and an underlying tremor of anticipation in the childish voices are the only sounds distinguishing the Louisiana Lions Camp from any other summer camp. The program of activities is basically the same. The difference lies in the campers, who are crippled, blind, deaf or mute.

This unique camp, the only one for crippled children in Louisiana and one of few in the nation, provides an annual full-scale summer camping program for an ever growing number of handicapped children, many of them house-bound the rest of the year. Located in the rolling, piney woodlands six miles north of Leesville, the 107-acre camp is a state-wide project of more than 7,000 Lions Club members.

Its origin dates back to 1957 with the creation of the Louisiana Lions League for Crippled Children, Inc. The following year a pilot camp was set up at Camp Windywood near Pollock. Results were so gratifying that the camp was continued there each summer until the present permanent camp was opened on July 9, 1961.

The League is guided by a board of directors, which is in charge of finances, long range planning, camper intake, camp personnel and program, site upkeep and beautification, endowment, constitution and by-laws, archives and statistics, membership development, camp improvements, public relations and attendance. Members of the executive committee are the president of the Lions League, the immediate past president, three vice presidents, secretary and treasurer.

Executive director of the camp is Paul Roussel. Staff members include a camp director, camp secretary, camp nurse, five instructors, two unit leaders, and 16 general counselors, a ratio of one counselor for every four handicapped children. Facilities include an All-Faiths Chapel, two bunkhouses, kitchen-dining hall, multi-purpose building, swimming pool, camp store, boat docks, stables, bridle paths, deep water well, utilities, blacktopped roads and concrete sidewalks.

Financed by voluntary contributions from Lions Clubs and auxiliaries in District 8 as well as by other interested organizations and individuals, the camp is available without charge or assessments to any handicapped child in Louisiana from eight through 15 years of age regardless of the economic status of the parents. However, applicants must be sponsored by a Lions Club, a Lions auxiliary or individual Lions Club members, who even provide each camper with $5 for spending money at the camp store.

The camp offers five full two-week sessions of supervised outdoor recreation and rehabilitation in an environment of childhood pleasures denied the handicapped in our normal society. Schedules include swimming, horse-back riding, archery, arts and crafts, hikes, cookouts, campouts, ball games, and supervised play. Campers also help plan and participate in water shows, horse shows, stunt nights, and carnivals as well as write and edit a camp newspaper. No stone is left unturned to provide everything a normal child would do at camp, giving the handicapped the chance to learn self reliance, independence and the give and take of social adjustment.

The Campers' View

That the children themselves understand and appreciate this is evident from an editorial in "The Lion's Roar," the camp newspaper. Written by a patrol of discerning girls, they defined camp as "one of the most enjoyable experiences of the year. It teaches us to understand the personalities and faults of others. It makes us realize that there is always someone who is worse off than we are. It also teaches us responsibility, leadership, and flexibility."

Six periods of activity are scheduled each day. Four of the periods include instruction in swimming, archery, horsemanship, and arts and crafts while the other two periods are devoted to play and free swimming.

The water safety method and skill sheets of the American Red Cross as followed in the swimming classes in the 70-foot T-shaped pool, which has a built-in ramp for wheelchair cases. Campers are classified as beginners, advanced beginners and swimmers with an occasional child taking Junior Life Saving instruction.

Probably as challenging an adventure as anything offered at the camp is horsemanship. Nor is it denied the severely handicapped, who are provided with a horse-drawn covered wagon and buckboard. Awards are made each session for a best all - around cowboy, all-around cowgirl, top hand, foreman and wrangler A fall off a horse merits a purple heart and everyone receives a participation award. Rides through the woods along trails marked with signs denoting "Boothill," "Ambush Glutch" and "Devils Bend" where a life-sized dummy hangs from a tree brings excited squeals. Horse shows are held every other Sunday with campers riding the barrels, and competing in spoon and egg, and hat and coat races.

Hitting the bull's eye is more than just a momentary achievement in the archery classes. An archer automatically becomes a member of the "Bull's Eye Club" with his first hit, and successive hits are recorded and posted daily for the highest honors — "The Bull's Eye King" and "The Bull's Eye Queen," which go to the boy and girl with the most hits.

Here again the severely handicapped are not left out. Two cross bows are mounted on stands for them. Neither is it unusual for a child without arms or one without the use of arms to become a good marksman with his feet. The camp has also had one blind student to rate with the National Camp Archery Association's affiliation rules of marksmanship.

Arts and crafts offer an outlet for the child's innate creative abilities, and rewarding results are drawings, paintings, and various types of handicrafts, including pot holders, plaited lanyards and baskets made of sucker sticks.

Highlighting the first week of every camping session is a field trip by bus to Louisiana's "Garden in the Forest" in the rolling Kisatchie Hills near Many. There they are feted by Hodges Gardens at lunch and given a tour of the 4,700-acre parkland of formal gardens, natural scenic areas, picnic grounds and greenhouses.

The Ultimate

Probably the ultimate in the crippled children's outdoor camp experience is the cookout and all night campout in the woods, which is held on the second Tuesday night of each session. Warm-ups for the big occasion include prior cookouts by each patrol.

Even inspection, the bane of all campers, is highly competitive. Each patrol vies for toy brooms and subsequent ribbons given daily for top honors. Over all winners are presented home-baked cakes.

Climaxing each session is a banquet, followed by the presentation of awards. Most highly coveted and cherished is the Starlight Award presented to the best and most outstanding boy and girl camper. In addition six other important presentations are made to the boy and the girl with the best personality, the most courteous, the best sport, the most likely to succeed, the most dependable and the most improved.

Impressive is the fact that homesickness among these necessarily sheltered youngsters is almost nil. It is the last and not the first day that is filled with tears, shared equally by the staff and the children. Each other day is filled with excited squeals, lilting laughter and happy song, but all too soon the camping experience ends. Remaining with the camp though, are bright memories, new friendships, and the knowledge that there is someone less fortunate than they.

ARCHERS BECOME members of the "Bull's Eye Club" with their first hit. Boys and girls with the most hits during each two - week session at the Lions Camp for Crippled Children are crowned Bull's Eye King and Queen.

WATER SAFETY methods and skill sheets of the American Red Cross are followed in the daily swimming classes at the Louisiana Lions Camp for Crippled Children.

Coast Guard Is International

By WARD T. SIMS

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Alex J. Babanin could have been any young seaman, sick and in need of immediate medical attention.

But he wasn't.

He was a seaman aboard the Soviet fisheries factory ship Churgin, in international waters far from his Communist homeland.

As a man in need of a doctor, Babanin played a key role this spring in one of the periodic thaws in the cold war common to this far corner of the globe, where the fish is king.

Through the 18-month period ending June 30, ships and men of the U.S. Coast Guard evacuated 26 foreign seamen, mostly fishermen, for medical treatment in U.S. facilities ashore.

Babanin, a dark, handsome youngster of 19, was among three Russians, including one woman, helped by Coast Guard mercy missions in the nothern Pacific Ocean and Bering Sea during this period.

The list also includes 21 Japanese and two Indians. The Indians, Chief Officer S. S. Kapadia and Seaman Abdul Gafoor Mohammed Ismail, were injured in falls aboard the Indian freighter Lakshmi Jayanti in January, as it steamed toward Ketchikan, Alaska, from Bombay.

Kapadia was hospitalized at Ketchikan and eventually returned to duty at sea. Ismail died aboard the rescue plane flying to Ketchikan.

The Churgin was operating in the windswept Pacific on May 2 when Babanin was felled by acute appendicitis.

Reacting quickly to the Churgin's radioed plea for help, the Coast Guard ordered the cutter Citrus to rendezvous with the Churgin at Chiniak Bay, Kodiak Island.

The Citrus sped the youth to Kodiak, where he was whisked aboard a Coast Guard plane for a 250-mile flight to Anchorage and an operation. Babanin was later returned to another ship of the Soviet fishing fleet off Seward.

The two other Russians who were the central figures in Coast Guard mercy evacuations were Urey Pavlov, 23, and the woman, Fira Codner, 35.

Pavlov was taken from the 278-foot Soviet trawler Sakhalin, southwest of the Shumagin Islands on April 25. He was suffering from a perforated ulcer.

Fira Codner was aboard the 125-foot Soviet trawler Altair in the Gulf of Alaska, off Yakutat, when taken ill last Nov. 7. Both were returned to ships of the Soviet fishing fleet after their recovery.

Most of the Soviet and Japanese fishing fleets off Alaska have someone aboard with a nodding acquaintance with the English language. If not, international code is used, or, in a pinch, the Coast Guard supplies its own interpreter.

The Coast Guard first contacts the U.S. naval hospital at Kodiak for advice on what treatment should be administered. The hospital also decides whether evacuation should take place.

"If there is any doubt," said Rear Adm. George D. Synon, commandant of the 17th Coast Guard District, "evacuation is immediately ordered."

Most of the foreign seamen are hospitalized at the naval hospital, Griffin Memorial Hospital at Kodiak or at the Alaska Native Medical Center, a U.S. Public Health Service facility at Anchorage.

Adm. Synon said he could not estimate the cost of Coast Guard mercy work.

"It would be extremely hard to make such an estimate because so many of these evacuations are effected by vessels or aircraft as a by-product of normal operations," he said.

"No attempt has ever been made, to my knowledge, to make a detailed cost evaluation of such evacuations, simply because we have that duty to perform.

"Federal law requires the Coast Guard to render all assistance possible to mariners in distress, regardless of nationality."

The cost of medical service and hospitalization is normally charged to the captain of the ship involved, or to the embassy of the nation whose ship is involved.

Once in a while, a call for assistance forewarns of tragedy.

Such was the case on Jan. 18 when the naval communications station at Adak intercepted a distress call on the international distress frequency, 2182 kilocycles.

Contact was lost almost immediately, but two Navy aircraft were launched from Adak after radio bearings placed the origin of the distress call at approximately 150 to 200 miles north of Adak. The search proved negative.

The following day, the Coast Guard radio station at Ketchikan received inquiries from three Soviet vessels, all of which refused to identify themselves, about a Soviet ship in distress. Another air search from Adak was fruitless.

On Jan. 20, the Coast Guard made repeated efforts, using an interpreter, to establish contact with the Soviet fishing fleet, to no avail.

The next day, the Soviet Embassy in Washington provided the first concrete information in the case, requesting aid through the State Department in locating the missing trawlers Sevsk, Sebech and Nahichevan.

The Russians said a fourth trawler, the Voksitogorsk, was known to have gone down in a Bering Sea storm.

Navy aircraft took to the air again on Jan. 21 and Jan. 22, but not a sign was seen of the three missing trawlers. The weather closed in the night of Jan. 22 and the search was suspended until Jan. 27, when a Coast Guard aircraft from Kodiak and the Cutter Storis were sent to the area to hunt for the missing Soviet ships. The search was called off Feb. 5.

To this date, not a trace of the vessels has been found.

The Russians were grateful for the American search efforts. In a note dated Feb. 18 they said: "The embassy expresses its gratitude of the Department of State for its assistance in this matter and also for the condolences conveyed to the families of the Soviet sailors who were lost."

LANGUAGE AND political barriers fall as Russian seaman Alex J. Babanin, 19, is lifted on a stretcher to the U.S. Coast Guard dock at Kodiak, Alaska, last May. Babanin, hit by acute appendicitis, was evacuated by the Coast Guard from the Soviet fisheries factory ship Churgin. He was flown to Anchorage for an operation, and later returned to another Soviet fishing ship. Nationality does not matter in the Coast Guard's many such missions. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Mountain In The Stars

When the earth was young its hot crust rose and fell as asphalt in the hot summer sun. Molten lava spewed from ventricles and volcanoes. It must have been an awesome sight to behold and one filled with phenomena more terrifying than imaginable. Later, there came the rains — eons of rains, frightful winds and howling seas. Mountains ranges rose, weathered, and fell. Whole continents disappeared beneath primeval seas. Turbulent oceans became lofty mountain ranges, and once-there was a vast bay where Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana farmers now til the soil.

On the eastern rim of this bay, rose the mighty Applachians — higher even than the Himalayas. At the foot of the range, under almost two miles of hardened crust, was a tremendous upsurge of molten stone. Unable to force its way to the surface as a volcano, the huge mass slowly cooled and over a hundred million years, solidified. The Appalachians aged and weathered. Millions of more years of rain washed the new soil from the huge mass, and one day, there emerged a mountain of stone. Waters receeded from the western bay, and much later, Indians trod the summit and looked across the unbelievably beautiful coun- Georgia.

On the West Coast is Disneyland. Dallas has Six Flags. For a scant sixty days more, New Yorkers still have the Fair. Stainless Steel worlds, they are, with glistening pavilions, tremendous excitement, and visions of the future. But fifteen miles from bustling, dynamic Atlanta, nature and men have worked together, and created Stone Mountain Park.

Somehow, there is something very different and quite wonderful about Georgia's stone vacationland. At the Mountain, one sees no pavilions of industry—but tributes to Confederate leaders, and the story of a valiant people. No gleaming monorails whisk passengers into a new century—just a very wonderful bright red and yellow glimpse into America's past, which chugs into the quaint little wooden railroad stations.

The Mountain has no artificial lions, tigers, crocodiles, and dinosaurs, but it does have Art Rilling's amazing game ranch where gentle fawns and quacking geese stroll happily along leafy paths and over rustic bridges with awed children. Bill, the Bison, has two wives and nurses a sore foot. The civet cat is interested in all visitors, baleful eyes gleaming through his cage while he hopefully awaits popcorn or crackerjacks.

The Plantation is so authentic. It very likely has no equal in the United States. Complete in every detail from the birthing room beneath the overseer's house, to the unbelievable service on the table of the formal dining room, it is a treasure-house of the Od South. The auto museum causes one to pause and realise how fast turn the sands of time, and what is now considered ancient. In addition to the elderly and honorable vehicles, all in actual running condition, there is a gleaming black 1941 Packard sedan!

Stone Mountain Lake sparkles in the afternoon sun and the ornate riverboat," General Robert E. Lee" cruises sedately along the channel. Suddenly, the peace of the day is rent by unearthly shouts and shots. The Lee is attacked by river pirates who seem to have come from the caves of Mark Twainland along the shore! The wild pirates are repulsed by a valiant crew. Interested visitors at the family campgrounds watch and possibly are fortunate enough to enjoy a cup of Dot Castle's excellent coffee. A curious fox peers through the trees and looks over the water.

Stone Mountain Hotel is supurb and filled with charm. It is complete with handrubbed walnut furniture, beautiful carpets and is remarkably priced. Very likely, it will become one of the Southeast's important vacation resorts. A Japanese travel executive thinks so much of the whole project, he returned to Tokyo and promptly began selling vacations to the South, most of which include trips to Stone Mountain. Confederate Hall might next summer assume an interesting oriental atmosphere. Halfway House on the Mountain will surely make Fujii climbers feel at home.

In the late afternoon, the light falls softly through the high trees. At the base of the Mountain is a quiet creek and a picnic place which is almost enchanted. The majestic grey stone rises and seems to disappear beyond the green branches. In the near distance, the train whistle moans a memory of other days.

When night deftly drops on the dark mountain, it is the time of the Skylift. The rolling beautiful hills of north Georgia seem to grasp the evening sky. Beneath the sturdy Swiss cable cars, there is a twinkling fairyland as far as the eye can see.

On and up, the cable car travels, and the calm face of Robert Lee emerges from the stone. General Lee seems almost to say, "People of the South, this our mountain. It will be here always. No man can move it. No man can cause it to disappear. Stone Mountain is God's work. Its base is here with us, but its top is in the stars."

Guevara's Death Unknown Yet, General Reports

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Junta leader Maj. Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera said Saturday reports that Cuban leader Maj. Ernesto Che Guevara was killed in the early days of the Dominican revolution appeared to be true but there was no proof.

Guevara, 37, Cuba's minister of industry, is generally regarded as the architect of the Cuban revolution led by Premier Fidel Castro. He dropped out of public view some time ago and there have been frequent rumors of his death.

American sources also were unable to confirm the report. Imbert said there were reports Guevara was killed and that his body was burned. He added his government is investigating the matter.

Imbert declined to say exactly when or where he believed Guevara was killed but said he had received information from several sources Guevara died in combat in Santo Domingo. The date and site of his alleged death were not known.

SCENES of YESTERYEAR

. . . in the Twin Cities

IT WAS A STERN looking group of seven that composed the Monroe Police force in 1894, the first year the force was uniformed. Although identification of the men in the photo isn't possible, chronicles of the time mention two members. One was Paul Hilton. He carried the title of inspector and was paid $60 a month. Another member, W. R. Lewis, was appointed in the spring of 1894 and served a long and successful career. With the force until his late 70's, "Uncle Bob" as he was called, lost an eye when making an arrest about the turn of the century but continued as an officer for many years. If you have a picture of an old Twin Cities scene bring or send it in to us along with all the information that you have. We would like to have it for publication.

Some of the most beautiful, interesting art in the world may be observed not only in museums, but also in cathedrals. This summer our small, self-conducted tour of five visited numerous cathedrals, particularly in Great Britain and France. These ancient buildings — some dating as far back as the 11th century — maintain a constant reminder of a day and time filled with a fabulous history.

At Canterbury, England, we visited the Canterbury Cathedral. It's construction began in 1070 and has continued under five architects, each employing his own style. (Numerous styles of architecture are found in most ancient cathedrals, however.) This is the famous cathedral in which Archbishop Thomas Becket was murdered. Much to our dismay, the monument built in his honor bears no resemblance to Richard Burton! !

Coventry Cathedral remains quite prominant in our minds also. In World War II the old cathedral at Coventry was bombed by the Germans. After the War it was decided that the cathedral would be rebuilt in 20th century style. The architect very skillfully joined the new building with the ruins of the old. He further placed a huge window in the new church through which one may see the old. The new church is modern almost to a shocking degree, but after a few moments of adjustment, we all agreed to its magnificence. There is a 70-foot tapestry behind the altar, gorgeous windows, and a fantastic organ. The old ruins are beautiful in their own way, too. At the far end of the medieval remains, stands a charred cross made from two beams salvaged from the bombing. Inscribed on the cross, are the words "FATHER FORGIVE".

At Selby Cathedral (still in Great Britain) we saw the famous "Washington Windows", built in honor of John Washington, George's father. There is also a commerative praising him for his son's contributions in "lands unknown to him." On one side of the altar was an American Flag.

At York, we visited York Minster, the largest medieval cathedral in Northern Europe. We evoked the interest of an elderly priest, who took it upon himself to give us a private tour of the cathedral. No stained glass window or sculpture was overlooked. He knew the complete history of the church to the last detail. He concluded the tour by taking us into the crypt, where we saw altars, columns, and graves, which were centuries old.

In Northern England after a marvelous tour of the Lake District, we visited Durham Cathedral. It was so very exciting! There was a T.V. or "Telly" show being taped. It was very amusing to watch the director explain to several dozen choir boys (ages 4-7) that they simply had to open their mouths widely while the singing was filmed. The only problem was the singing had been taped before, and it was necessary for the boys to move their mouths as if they were really singing. The tape, however, was never synchronized with the movement of mouths-which required several re-runs! ! To top this all off, curious onlookers persisted in stepping before the camera, and we must admit we were curious. We must confess, moreover, with all of the distractions, we have forgotten the historical significance of this church! !

In France, we visited the cathedral of Notre Dame at Reims. Perhaps, the most interesting aspect of this church was the commemoration of Joan of Arc.

We visited another cathedral of Notre Dame at Chartres. It is well known because it still looks much as it did in the Middle Ages. Many of the original stained glass windows remain, beautifully illustrating stories from the New and Old Testaments.

Though we visited numerous other cathedrals, we barely scratched the surface in our short five weeks. There is, indeed, a whole world of intriguing art in all forms waiting to be discovered by anyone willing to search.

Garden Center Notes

Fall Garden Routines Due

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Now that vacations are coming to an end we must settle down to our fall routines. With the garden clubbers, it means the fall meeting when all members come back together after two months. Some few clubs meet all through the summer months, but, most clubs disband in July and August. This first meeting in the fall can be exciting because of all the reports from members who have been on trips, far away places, or near-by interesting spots.

New plants and gardening ideas may be presented. Many gardeners have shopped for souvenir containers, driftwood, or accessories. We always come back feeling that the garden club world is just one big happy family. Being refreshed from our vacation will start us off as a good working group. Being in a working club is valuable to each of it's members. More is accomplished, learned, and more pleasure from doing our tasks is our reward.

There is a need for more and more of these working clubs since there is an expansion of new developments everywhere. Lovely new neighborhoods that have sprung up almost overnight.

What better way to get with the new neighbor over a friendly cup of coffee or tea than at a morning garden club meeting. One might ask the question, "What would one need to become a desirable garden club member?" You may think of several things — education; social position; wealth; a gift for leadership; or simply a lovely garden — well, none of these properties are the "most" necessary qualities for a good garden club member. The answer lies mostly in "Interest."

We must first have this quality to become interested in gardening, learning the skills required in the arts related to gardening, such as improved methods of horticulture, landscaping and flower arrangement. Our next quality is the ability to work with others in accomplishing a desired end. This is very important. This will create a wonderful relationship — all sharing the same worthwhile project. Real happiness comes from this. Satisfaction in doing something creative.

Then, there is the faculty of seeing over the garden wall — the world that lies beyond. A broad outlook is acquired through experience and contact with the outside world by becoming acquainted at first hand with the needs and interests of others; by identifying oneself with community progress, with highway beautification, the preservation of wildlife, developing an interest in national resources, and appreciation of National Parks and an eagerness to fight whatever threatens to destroy the beauty and value of the priceless gifts of God.

This is a short summary of just what a good garden club member must possess. If each member had all these qualities just think what a fine club it would be. Something to aim at anyway.

To organize a club there are certain requirements.

First an interested person must select a day and place to meet and give an invitation to those who have expressed a desire to join. The first, or organizational meeting, is most important and should proceed as follows:

The person bringing the group together should preside long enough to obtain a temporary chairman and recording secretary elected by the group, at which time they should vote on organizing a Garden Club.

By-laws and nominating committees should be appointed and the time and place set for the next meeting. At the second meeting the group is called to order by the temporary chairman. The minutes of the previous meeting are read by the secretary. The report of the by-laws committee is given and the chairman moves "that these by-laws by adopted".

The by-laws are then read paragraph by paragraph to allow for amendments. After the by-laws have been read through and perfected, the motion to adopt is voted on. When adopted, the Chairman declares a short recess to permit the charter members to sign the by-laws and pay their dues.

The meeting is then re-convened, the report of the nominating committee is read, and the officers are elected. The officers may be installed at that time or at the next meeting.

The federated clubs usually have the district director or another club president, state officer or chairman to install them.

Every new club should take a peep over the garden wall in the very beginning, with an idea of going forward — progressing with all that is new and helpful in the world that lies beyond — thus, plan to become a Federated garden Club.

Many clubs just starting have asked, "What does the state federation do for our club?" This is a good question!

First it identifies it with the larger movement for civic, state and national garden work and gives it a part in it. Club members are allowed to attend flower show schools and become national accredited flower show judges, which permits one to judge in shows in any state. These shows are the best source of information and education for individual members on horticulture, flower show practice, flower arranging, and landscape design.

Those taking the course are not required to become judges. All club members should take advantage of the opportunity of going to these schools which are held in the spring and fall. Dates for these schools this fall are:

Sept. 21 - 23 — Course 2, Shreveport, La.; Sept. 27 - 29— Course 2, Ruston, La.; Oct. 12-14 — Course 3, Abberville, La.; Oct. 18 - 20 — Course 3, DeRidder, La.; Nov. 16 - 18 — Course 5, Baton Rouge, La.

Clubs belonging to the federation are eligible for state and national awards. The federation is strengthened when the clubs join enabling them to carry out better projects concerning gardening and civic improvement. Workshops held during convention enables clubs to exchange ideas and know each other better.

Membership in the federation brings all parts of the state together making for better understanding and cooperation.

Clubs desiring membership in the Federation of Louisiana Garden Clubs may contact Mrs. M. L. Johnson, Fifth District Director, Box 4340, Monroe, La. Send in your membership list, time you were organized, name of Club, and the required membership-fee is $1.00 per member. This also, pays for National membership with the National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc.

Modern Touches Provided For Traditional Two Story

ARCHITECT SAMUEL PAUL has added modern design features to this traditional two-story house, giving it an up-to-date look on the outside and providing the kind of good traffic circulation demanded by home owners these days.

By ANDY LANG

There has been a great renewal of interest in two-story houses in recent years. Many of these homes have continued in the old Colonial tradition. Others have borrowed from these traditions and adapted them to the contemporary way of life.

The newest House of the Week is of the latter type. It utilizes much of traditional detailing and exterior styling, but incorporates these into a home that has a subdued contemporary tones, both inside and outside.

The floor plan, in particular, is as modern and up-to-date as can be, with a bit of individual excitement. Most interesting of all is the unusual disposition of space, whereby the living room is raised to a level by itself and the ground floor contains a den or spare bedroom, plus a spacious family room, in addition to the normal complement of kitchen, dinette and formal dining room.

Characteristics

There is a touch of split-level design in this arrangement. Architect Samuel Paul intended it to be so. The result is a home with the best characteristics of both two-story and split-level planning. For instance, there is the opportunity to utilize a small basement under the living room only, thus cutting costs. Note that a full basement can be had if desired.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-97.

The living room is one of the most dramatic features of Design H-97. There is a continuous cathedral ceiling, a husky brick fireplace, windows at both the front and the rear, and an attractive screen along the stair to the second floor. Down four steps in the flagstoned reception foyer is a lovely stone planter backed up by a paneled wall — a striking interior arrangement.

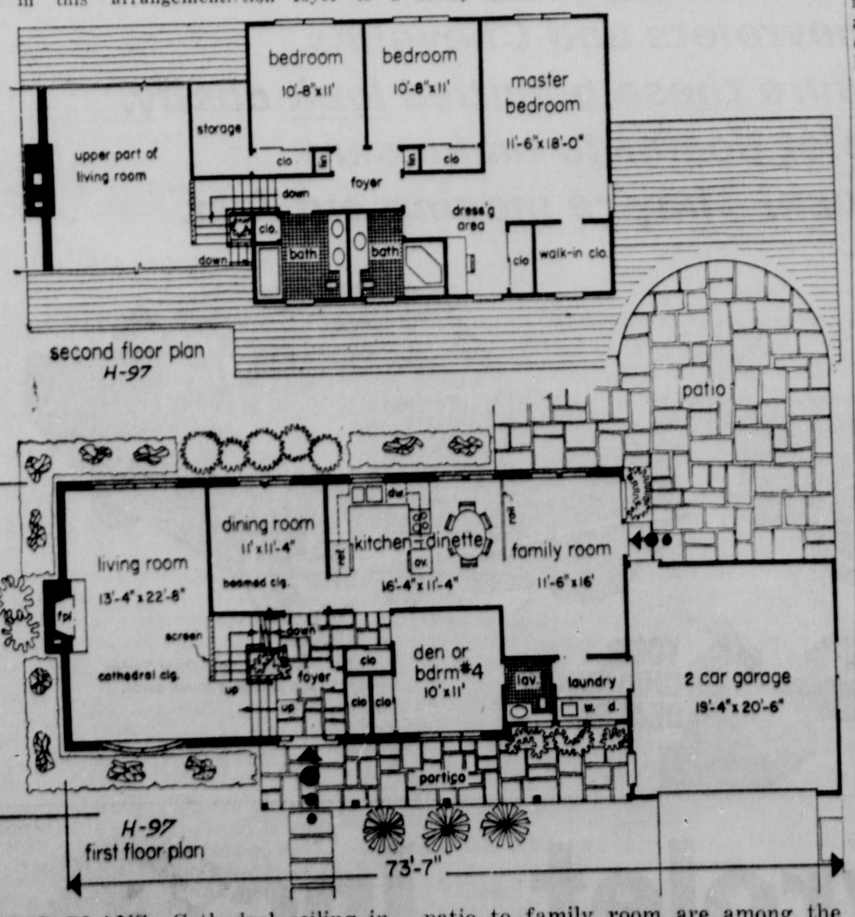
There's fine planning on the ground floor, too. Note the formal dining room with its beamed ceiling and the adjoining, fully - equipped, efficient U-shaped kitchen along with an informal dinette space. This is wide open to the comfortable family room, in effect visually expanding the entire area. Immediately behind the family room is a laundry room with windows facing the front, an adjoining lavatory and the inside garage entrance.

Extra Room

Finally, to round off the ground floor, is an extra room located right off the foyer. It is ideally suited for a den, fourth bedroom or guest room. It has its own large closet and a private entrance to the lavatory.

The bedroom floor has three comfortably - sized bedrooms, including a master suite. This suite encompasses a large walk-in closet, a windowed dressing table area with another closet, and a large bath with a recessed, squarish - style tub, generally considered the roomiest tub on the market. The other bath is extra spacious and includes a towel closet. The closets in the second and third bedrooms are oversized, and there are twin linen closets in the bedroom foyer.

Behind the two-car garage is a flagstoned patio which extends around in back of the family room. A door in the family room leads to this out-door living area. Architect Paul has made it convenient to park the car and go into the house from the rear of the garage to the family room or through either of two other doors, one leading to the washup area, the over to the covered front portico.



FLOOR PLANS: Cathedral ceiling in living room, beamed ceiling in dining room, excellent kitchen - dinette arrangement and convenience of rear patio to family room are among the many features incorporated into design of this two-story house.

Southern Gardener

Colchicums Add Color

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The brilliant August and September colchicums and the fall crocuses are so new to Southern gardens that people often ask just where to plant them.

One of the main things to take into consideration in locating colchicums is that they have no autum foliage after the flowers die down, but they do have large rosettes of leaves, in some kinds as big as your hand, in late winter and early spring. Here in the South, this foliage dies away quickly with the onset of that hot period that comes in late March or early April.

Handsome Foliage

Colchicum foliage is very handsome along about the time daffodil leaves are coming out, so this is no problem. The dazzling magic flowers that will begin to show up in gardens in about a week from now on the deep violet variety called Autumn Queen provide a powerful touch of the most cheerful color at this time of the year.

The flowers of this variety have white stems and a white throat which shows when they are wide open. One of the most charming things about colchiums is the way the flowers arise in a tight bunch and then open two by two. On their third day, they open out wide like big tulips. One clump may go on and on this way for as many as 10 days.

As we have mentioned previously in the column, a colchicum corm or two at the base of a clump of the violet form of Sedum spectabile, with its succulent leaves, make an eye-catching combination in late August and early September.

Bright Color

As a matter of fact, the best use of colchicums is to liven up the garden with groups and patches of bright color at the end of August and the beginning of September. They are delightful anywhere you plant them. If it is possible to locate them where you can see the light through the flowers, they will excite you with their brilliance. When they are grown in pots, they are spectacular up in a window with the light shining through, and if you pick a few flowers they are dazzling in a window. Since they come from very hot countries, the flowers can take the sunlight without bad effect for two to three days.

For five or more years, I have had a little patch of colchicums at the base of some clumps of liriope. When the two flower together, the difference in form of the flowers and the liriope foliage make a striking group. I thought the liriope would surely have taken all the food away and starved out these colchicums long since, but the annual top-dressing that everything gets seems miraculously to keep the colchicums going.

One of the showiest colchicums is The Giant, now beginning to show up in seed and bulbs stores and catalogues. The stems are as much as eight inches long, and the long showy pink - lavender flowers can be as much as four to five inches across when open. Any colchicum is beautiful, however, and the commonest one sold in the dime stores makes up for size with innumerable smaller silvery pink flowers over a long period of time.

Get Annuals For Beauty

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, like annuals in your landscape then, we have a bulletin for you. The bulletin was prepared by Neil Odenwald, our horticulturist and is entitled, "Grow Annuals for Year-Round Beauty." So if you want one, call the Agricultural Extension office in West Monroe and a copy will be mailed to you. This is one of the services of the Ouachita Agricultural Extension Service. In the bulletin, Neil gives the use of annuals in the landscape, cultivating annuals, controlling insects, and annuals to use in Louisiana. In the chart you will find planting time, time of bloom, height of growth, color of blossom and remarks which are helpful in growing annuals. There are ever so many annuals to plant in August, September and November so get your copy now and grow annua's for year round beauty.

H. D. Council Members

Home Demonstration Council members, Mrs. Jewel Earl, your president, asked that I notify you of the change in the meeting for September. In oder to make important plans and decisions about the Parish Fair, it is necessary to meet the first Friday in September which will be September 3. Be sure, Mrs. President of each of the twenty five clubs, that you contact your council members. There are many important decisions to be made, so make your plans to attend this important meeting. The following clubs will be hostess: Liberty, chairman; Thrifty Homemaker, Claiborne, Eureka, Cypress and Okaloosa. The clubs that were to serve in July are being asked to assist with September and November meetings.

Cotton Care

Cotton is one of the most versatile fabrics, ranging in texture from the sheerest batiste of a christining dress to the hardy denim used in work clothes. Such cotton fabrics as wash-wear, wrinkle resistant and polished cottons, look very nice with a minimum amount of care. Wash-wear cottons have been chemically treated to require little or no ironing. They are usually labeled as minimum care, drip dry, no iron, or similar terms. Quality wash-wear cottons can be laundered in soap or detergent suds, will dry quickly and smoothly after rinsing and will not shrink out of shape. For best results, use the tumbling or dripping methods rather than spinning in the machine. A warm iron is best for needed touch ups.

Wrinkle resistant cottons are chemically treated to wrinkle less during actual wear. They generally need only light pressing.

Polished cottons are those with a surface luster. The luster is durable, having been fixed by resins and then mechanically buffed to the desired glossiness. Some polished cottons are wash-wear or wrinkle resistant.

Pressing such cottons with a warm iron is quick and easy. They may be machine or hand washed. Starching is unnecessary unless the fabric has been washed a number of times.

Children's Shoes, Socks

Mrs. Consumer, it is time to buy those shoes and socks for school children, and there are several things to look for when buying. The sole of the shoe should be flexible and provide adequate support under the arch. The shoe should fit snugly, but not tightly around the heel. There should be the width of the adult thumb between the end of the toe and the end of the shoe.

Fitting the socks is of equal importance to the shoe. A sock that is half an inch longer than the longest toe should be worn to eliminate pressure on children's toes.

A Thought

Keep busy at something. A very busy person never has time to be unhappy.

CURTAIN CALL

By JACQUE BIEGENWALD

In the theatre, contrary to life, activity begins in the autumn of the year, and with the coming of late August, the Monroe Little Theatre begins to stir again.

This week we're happy to be able to announce the plays scheduled for next season's production at Strauss Playhouse. They will be: "The Pleasure of His Company," "Everybody Loves Opal", "How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," "The Bad Seed" and "Never Too Late."

"The Pleasure of His Company" concerns a young couple about to be married. When the bride-to-be's father, divorced by her mother years ago, returns to give her away in marriage, his well-known playboy reputation precedes him, and wrecks a good deal of havoc before the final, inevitably happy ending.

The unusual occupation (for a woman) as junk dealer, is the nucleus of "Everybody Loves Opal." She becomes involved with a band of criminals, led by a former college professor, who take out insurance on her life, then try to collect. Good heartedly, she refuses to believe any bad intentions on their part — definitely broad comedy.

"How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying" is a musical comedy — called "the funniest in years" by one N. Y. critic, and, of course, is about big business. It won a recent Pulitzer Prize.

"The Bad Seed" is heavy drama — the chilling story of a mother who suspects her child might be a murderer a long run hit on Broadway a few seasons back.

A serenely secure couple, well into their maturity, and happily looking forward to the prospect of grandchildren by way of a married daughter, are suddenly faced with the shattering discovery that they are about to become parents again— and so evolves the plot of "Never Too Late," a delightful comedy.

Some of these titles are familiar, some not so familiar, but there will undoubtedly be that annual rush on the public library as our eager thespians search through play collections for that perfect part, "just made for me".

The membership drive opened this week when Mrs. Robert Wood and Mrs. John Mullens had approximately ninety workers in for coffee and a briefing on procedure Monday.

Marge is general membership chairman and Camille is in charge of patron membership this year, assisted by Mrs. Charles E. Brown. Those serving on Marge's committee are Mrs. Elizabeth Atkinson, Mrs. Armond McHenry Jr., Mrs. Jack Files, Mrs. Bill Mahaffey, Mrs. C. D. Oakley Jr., Mrs. Cyril Yancey, Mrs. Mark Price, Mrs. Wilbur Keko, Mrs. D. Ryan Sartor, Mrs. Craig Morgan and Mrs. C. A. Roberts.

Each of these ladies has a large committee working with her. You may call any of them or your reporter for more information about membership.

Our sympathies this week are extended to the family of Philip Embanato who passed on this past week. Philip was active in our theatre for several years prior to the second world war.

Philip designed the sets for "Three Cornered Moon," "The Late Christopher Bean" and "Big Hearted Herbert," and once acted as stage manager. He acted in "Susan and God," "Goodbye Again", "The Inspector General," and "Ghost Train."

During the quiet prevailing at Strauss Playhouse the past two weeks, Frances Yeldell and Holly Bayne completely rearranged the wardrobe, a job that was sorely needed.

Frances sends out her annual call for additions to the wardrobe department — any thing from grandmother's bustle to last season's faded hat will be welcome as we are always in need of costumes.

ASC Elections In Three Wards Declared Void

HOMER (Special) — The 1965 ASC Committee elections were completed for six of the nine wards in Claiborne Parish, but elections for wards five, six, and seven were declared invalid and have been rescheduled. The original elections in the wards were declared invalid because of ineligible nominees appearing on the ballots.

To be eligible, the nominee must live in the community he will serve if elected. Ward boundaries are community boundaries.

A new slate of nominees will be required and petitions to place the names of other nominees on the ballots will be accepted through August 25.

A petition must contain the name of only one nominee and must be signed by six eligible voters (persons eligible to vote in the committee election.) Eligible voters may sign as many petitions as they desire. Persons nominated by the petition will be placed on the ballots if found eligible and willing to serve.

If not eligible to serve, they will be notified of the ineligibility and the right to appeal.

Ballots will be mailed to farmers not later than September 4 and are to be mailed or returned to the Parish ASCS office in Homer not later than September 14.

The parish convention has been postponed until a valid election has been completed in all nine wards in the Parish.

Clean-Up Project

A clean-up crew got together this weekend at Smith's Cemetery just off the Old Natchitoches Road in West Monroe, and gave the place a good going over. The cleaning project was combined with a business meeting in order to elect new trustees for the job. E. L. Beebe was named chairman and others in the group will be Edward Blazier, L. O. Thompson and G. L. Stennett. The group will meet again Friday, Aug. 27 to discuss future improvements of the cemetery.

Two Will Join Music Faculty At Northeast

Two new members of the music faculty at Northeast Louisiana State College were announced Saturday by Joe Barry Mullins, head of the department.

They are Daniel T. Fletcher, instructor in piano, and John D. Upchurch, instructor of brass instruments. Both will join the faculty for the beginning of the fall semester.

Fletcher and Upchurch are both natives of Georgia, received their bachelor's degrees in music at Stetson University in Florida and master's degrees in music at Indiana University.

They are from Marietta and Atlanta, Ga., respectively.

Fletcher was assistant in piano at Indiana U. while engaged in graduate study. During the past year he served as assistant to concert artist Sidney Porter.

He received his master's degree with Distinction and was awarded the university's top honor for a performing artist, the coveted Performer's Certificate. He has performed as guest soloist with symphony orchestras in Florida, Georgia and Indiana.

Upchurch, also an honor student, taught for a year in DeKalb, Ga., public schools after graduation from Stetson. He taught brass technique at Indiana U. while working on his master's degree during the past year. His graduate major was trombone.

Both men are married. Fletcher is the father of a daughter, 10 months old. Upchurch also has one child, a daughter, age 2.

Revised Plans For Building At Tech Cited

RUSTON (Special) — Revised plans are nearing completion for the expansion of Louisiana Tech's state and federally supported new electrical engineering building.

Enlargement of the orginally proposed structure was made possible by the federal government's allocation of $260,000 in matching funds to supplement a state grant of $500,000.

The expanded plans for the building, prepared by Beuford Jacka, a West Monroe architect, are expected to be sent within 10 days to Fort Worth for consideration by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which is administering the federal grant for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Bids for erecting the laboratory building probably will be advertised sometime in September, according to Dean Ben T. Bogard of the Tech School of Engineering.

Of the $260,000 federal contribution, $250,000 is earmarked for construction and the remaining $10,000 of that sum will be applied to buying furniture and fixtures. The $250,000 plus the allotment of $500,000 provided by the State Bond and Building Commission make a total of $750,000 available for construction.

Details of the new building were planned by a Tech engineering faculty committee in conjunction with the architect.

The federal fund has made possible the enlargement of the building from 25,250 square feet to approximately 37,500 square feet, Dean Bogard said.

The revised plans call for an E-shaped hall with three wings extending southward from the main section, which will face north. The building will be located on the parking lot east of the Engineering Annex and will be approximately 234 feet long across the front.

The new structure primarily will house the electrical engineering department but also will include some inter-disciplinary laboratories for all of the engineering departments of the school.

The two-story air-conditioned building will include 28 laboratories, eight large classrooms, several offices and accommodations for additional research work. One of the advantages of the new building will be the provisions for much better engineering research, both sponsored by off-campus firms and generated within the college, Dean Bogard pointed out.

Dodgers Win 6-4 With Parker

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Wes Parker's two-run homer in the 11th inning Saturday lifted the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-4 victory over San Francisco and back into the National League lead.

By winning, the Dodgers moved one-half game ahead of the Milwaukee Braves, who lost to Pittsburgh 3-0. The third-place Giants are 1½ games off the pace.

Parker connected with two out in the 11th against Frank Linzy, San Francisco's fourth pitcher of the day. Jim Lefebvre opened the inning against loser Bill Henry with a single and was sacrificed to second. Lou Johnson grounded out, with pinch runner Willie Crawford going to third, before Parker homered.

Johnny Podres, the Dodgers' fourth pitcher, was the winner with two innings of hitless relief.

Willie Mays tied the score 4-4 in the bottom of the eighth with his fifth homer in as many days. Mays' 37th of the season and 13th this month was hit with the bases empty off releiver Bob Miller.

John Roseboro moved the Dodgers ahead 4-3 in the seventh inning with a two-run homer off starter Bob Bolin.

The Giants had taken a 3-2 lead in the sixth on a two-run homer by Willie McCovey and a sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Orlando Cepeda.

Dodger starter Claude Osteen had given up only two hits up to the sixth. But the left-hander walked Tito Fuentes leading off the inning before giving up a 400-foot home run to McCovey, his 29th of the season.

Mays followed with a single and a walk to Jim Hart brought in Miller.

Worthington, Oliva Lead Twins' 4-2 Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tony Oliva knocked in two runs and reliever Al Worthington choked off a bases-loaded threat in the eighth inning as American League-leading Minnesota defeated the Los Angeles Angels 4-2 Saturday night.

Oliva, with a single and a run-scoring fly, and Ziolo Versalles, with two singles, combined to wreck Angel right-hander Fred Newman, 11-11, who suffered his fourth straight loss.

The Twins broke a scoreless tie after Versalles and Sandy Valdespino opened the sixth inning with singles to start a three-run rally.

Blancas Captures 2nd Round Lead In Carling

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Homero Blancas, a 27-year-old rookie pro tourist from Houston, stormed into a one-stroke lead with a four-under-par 67 and a 138 total Saturday at the halfway mark of the $200,000 Carling World Golf Tournament.

Teeing off at 7:32 a.m., long before most of the day's crowd of 25,575 arrived at the Pleasant Valley Country Club, Blancas put together nines of 34 and 33, needing only 27 putts on the 6,713-yard, par 36-35—71 layout.

The former University of Houston star, who insists he never has taken a lesson from a golf pro, took over the first place as Mike Souchak, the opening day leader with a 68, settled for a 71 and dropped into a tie for second with Jim Ferree and Joe Campbell, the cigar-smoking comeback player.

Ferree added a 70 to his 69 with the help of a 95-foot putt on the 13th green, which he managed to get on after driving into trees and then hitting his second shot into the rough.

"It was the longest putt I've ever made, ever have seen or even heard of," he said. "I couldn't even see the hole."

Campbell, rebounding from two straight poor years on the PGA trail, struggled to a 70 despite sending three drives into the rough. He was aided with a birdie 2 on the ninth hole when, using his putter, he sank a virtual chip shot from 35 feet.

HOMEREO BLANCAS ... Takes Lead

Souchak missed three putts from within four feet as his game on the green faltered slightly. At one point, he used his wedge on a three-foot putt because of a rough spot in the ball's path and missed.

Sam Snead, the 53-year-old veteran from White Sulpher Springs, W.Va., mastered exacting fairways and mammoth greens in posting a 68, the day's second lowest score.

Snead moved into a four-way tie for fifth place in a bid to haul down top prize money of $35,000.

Milwaukee Loses To Bucs, Falls Back Out Of 1st Spot

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bill Mazeroski's steal of home—his first theft of the season—helped Pittsburgh veteran Bob Friend to his first victory since July 23, a 3-0 conquest of the Milwaukee Braves Saturday.

The loss, coupled with Los Angeles' 11-inning, 6-4 victory over San Francisco, dropped the Braves out of first place in the National League, one-half game behind the Dodgers.

Friend, running his record to 6-10, gave up only five hits, three of them to Hank Aaron, and was in serious trouble only once.

Mazeroski walked in the fourth and, with one out, went to third on Jim Pagliaroni's single. He stole home on reliever Hank Fischer, who was credited with a wild pitch on the play which Pagliaroni advanced to second.

The Pirates jumped on starter Dennis Lemaster, now 6-10, for two runs in the second inning. Mazeroski led off with a single and moved to second on Andre Rodgers' single. With one out Gene Alley doubled Mazeroski home, Rodgers going to third. Friend grounded to shortstop and Dennis Menke and Rodgers beat the throw home. It was Friend's first RBI of the season.

Out Of Bounds

You Asked, We Tell

With Stuart Hill

Off and on, which is about the same as now and again, someone inquires as to the amount of progress we are making in the game of golf. Just the other day in a local cafeteria, an aquaintance asked how we were coming along—she was an aunt, but no matter.

We were all prepared to sit down and whip out a lot of fancy jargon connected with the game but thought better of it and let it go with a sly smile and a shrug of the shoulders.

The response was apropos, a laugh.

A major breakthrough was in the making last week when a beautiful approach shot on the first hole left the ball about three feet from the cup. Playing alone — with all that pressure — we sank the putt for a par.

Complacently strolling to the second tee we thought, "What a shame there is no one along, nobody will believe this."

Figuring we were in for that hot round that everyone is supposed to have, we shanked the ball off the tee, sighed heavily, was thankful there was no one else along, decided we could do better on such a short hole, and drove a well sliced nine iron into the lake before taking a triple bogey on a par three hole.

Feeling that our game was back down to normal par, we staggered in a daze to the third tee and continued to play our normal game until the final hole when we mustered another par.

Ah, but that last hole on the Municipal course, which Guy DePriest has managed to double-eagle. We drove through the trees — by hook or crook with a little more hook — topped one that sent the ball scurrying about 60 yards and left a grinning ball lying on the left side of the fairway with a hugh oak guarding the green. With nothing to lose we whacked a seven iron over the tree, a distance of about 100 yards, onto the green. We knew we were cutting it close because the ball just cleared the tree and a woman and her two children who were walking close to the green ran for the clubhouse just after the ball hit.

Confidence restored, we sauntered up to the green to find an 18 inch put awaiting for a bird. After muffing the putt and taking a par the totals went like this: two pars, one triple bogey, three bogies, and four double bogies for a total of 14 over after nine.

Thinking that those who fight and run away will live to fight another day, we quit after nine.

Actually the recollection of Gene Dahlbender Jr, clearing a similar obstacle in the 1961 Cotton States made us try to clear the tree on our latest outing and perhaps we can pick up a few more pointers in the upcoming tournament.

Water, Cotton, Water, Cotton States

The Cotton States tournament at Bayou DeSiard is appropriately named. In 16 years there has not been a winner or runner-up from a non cotton-producing state. And while farmers have found it necessary to have a little water to increase production, the members of Bayou DeSiard have found that a little water goes a long way toward making and keeping a course in better condition for a tournament as well as regular play.

By the use of a great deal of forsight and ingenuity by several of its members, Bayou DeSiard has installed a watering system that is a combination of automatic and manual. While the watering operation of the fairways is by the use of pipes, connected with spaced spouts — much like the method used for watering football fields — the tees and greens can be watered automatically, just as the housewife puts on a roast and sets an electric timer.

This watering system has been operating for several weeks and amiable club pro Winnie Cole offers this speculation: "Because of this new system, the course should be in better shape (for the tournament) than it ever has been."

It is a well known fact to those who keep up with the Cotton States that three time winner Homero Blancas, who is leading the field today going into third round of the Carling World tourney, leaves a title here undefended in his quest for PGA gold.

Four members of Houston's River Oaks Country Club have guaranteed Blancas expense money of $12,000 for two years. The quartet, Walter Mischer, Howard Terry, Ted Law and Charles Dunwoody, shares in the rookie pro's earnings on a percentage basis and has an option for a two year renewal of the original agreement.

This year's Cotton States field has already drawn NAIA champ Craig Metz, and three top members of the University of Texas team, Randy Geiselman, Eugene Mitchell, and Mason Adkins, one-two-three, in that order. LSU will be represented by Mike Keck, Randy Wolff, Tommy Elkins, Scott Wheaton and Henry Cole. Eight players from Memphis State will play along with Bob Rogers and Buddy Short of USL. Of course, Clayton Cole, last year's runner up will be around with a good shot on the inside track.

Tournaments And Double-Eagles

While Bayou DeSiard is preparing for its biggest show of the year several other affairs are going on around town.

A 36-hole tourney, the Twin City Open Invitational, is set at Charmingdale Saturday and Sunday with qualifying running through this week. With six flights of 16 players each expected, the championship group will shoot medal with all other flights playing matches. A pro-am is set up for Friday, the day before the tourney starts, along with putting and driving contests.

Charmingdale pro Carl Gallo also says there are several people who have certificates as winners in the recent National Golf Day affair waiting to be picked up. A medal is also waiting for Bob Bealle, Billy Wilson, Fred Spatafora, George Jacobs, George McDonald, Doug Haynes, George Elias, Jim Tonore, Edna Donaldson and Idilia Gallo.

The club championship is currently underway at Highland Park in West Monroe with Wayne Peddy and F. E. Patterson meeting to decide who will go in the finals against Raymond Winn.

Gene Adams knocked out defending champ Ken Holt, 2-1 in the opening round with Winn beating Moose Charlton, 4-3. Peddy stopped A. C. Williams, 7-6 and F. E. Patterson beat George Patterson, 3-2. Winn then defeated Adams, 4-3 to go into the finals.

The finals will be played this week.

That double-eagle mentioned earlier is not the whole story. In all there was a two, a three, a four, a five and a six on the par five hole at Muny.

Guy DePriest carded the double-eagle with a six iron from about 165 yards out while Hoyt Highfil eagled the hole. Pro Johnny Myers took a bird, Bob Hardquist scored a par and Ray Mulhearn took the bogey.

Myers says he has heard of staggered scores in foursomes, but never in a fivesome.

ED O'BRADOVICH, No. 87, and Jim Purnell, No. 53, of the Chicago Bears pounce all over quarterback Bart Starr, No. 15, of the Green Bay Packers at County Stadium in Milwaukee, Wisc., Saturday as they dropped him for a 14-yard loss when he was unable to spot a pass receiver in the open. Despite occasional efforts such as this, the Packers beat the Bears, 31-14, in the Shrine game, a National Football League exhibition. (AP Wirephoto)

Field Filling Fast For Cotton States

The field is rapidly filling for the 17th annual renewal of the Cotton States Invitational Golf Tournament scheduled Sept. 3-6 at Bayou DeSiard Country Club.

Club pro Winnie Cole said responses to invitations have been coming in at a steady clip and the field is expected to be complete this week.

Entries are limited to the first 160 responses and several state amateur champions are expected to play along with others who have gained recognition by winning other well known amateur events.

The Cotton States has a history dating to 1949, but the man who has made the most habit of winning the top amateur event in north Louisiana is unable to compete this year.

Homero Blancas, former University of Houston star, put three Cotton States victories back-to-back and had to take a little time off from the Army to do it one year.

Blancas, who has swapped his amateur status, with the financial backing of several Houston residents for a tour on the pro tour, has left the crown undefended.

Many golf observers feel that Blancas is on his way to Rookie-of-the-year honors in the PGA.

Blancas, however, is not the only professional to cut his teeth in the Cotton States tournament. Several other past winners and runners-up have turned to golf as a career.

While Blancas is not the only amateur to win the tourney three times, he is the only one to put the wins back-to-back. Gene Dahlbender Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., copped titles in 1955 and 1956 but then waited until 1961 before winning again.

The top drawing affair has been won by Louisiana residents only three times, and two winners were from Monroe. W. W. Jones took the first title in 1949 and Jack Rivers the crown ten years later. Tommy Wulff, of New Orleans, who has since turned professional, won the affair in 1958.

White Sox Take Eighth Straight

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Al Weis' two-out, run-scoring single in the 11th inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 7-6 victory over Kansas City and their eighth straight triumph Saturday night.

Don Buford singled off Lew Krausse with one out in the 11th and moved to third as Tom McCraw singled one out later. Weis then drilled a single to left for the winning run.

Irish I Spreading To Nation's Teams

By BOB HOBBING
Boston Herald
For The Associated Press

The Irish I is spreading over college football this fall as teams prepare to show off their shiny new platoons.

Louisiana State, a bona fide national championship candidate with 32 lettermen, heads the list of schools that would rather switch to than fight the I formation.

That's the offensive springboard from which Notre Dame's Fighting Irish stormed back into the headlines with a 9-1 season last fall and the vehicle mighty Arkansas used to sweep aside 11 f

Of course, the best Paris couturier will admit the talent you fit into the garment is all-important but in football styles there's no substitute for success. The I's had it a year ago so the stampede is under way. Maryland's Tom Nugent claims invention of the I although some contend it dates back to antiquity.

But it took a lot of tall winning to accelerate the conversion.

Along with the I formation, the trends to watch on 1965 varsity gridirons include:

—Nearly unlimited substitution which permits full-team substitution whenever the ball changes hands, two men per squad any time.

—Many additional variations in offensive and defensive alignments plus an abnormal amount of personnel juggling as a result of the rule.

—A closer identity with prostyle, wide open attacks.

— An even greater reliance on the forward pass. The hard-running option quarterback can no longer just take an occasional toss, he'll have to be able to pull 'em off. Halfback passes are on the rise too.

— More followers of the Texas flip-flop alignment of ends and backs where the split end or flanked back, for instance, always retains that role whether the team lines up strong to the left or right.

— Increased infiltration of Miami of Ohio men into the coaching ranks.

Properly executed, plays from the I can generate great power and-or deception. LSU's Coach Charlie McClendon will employ a strong I for more effectiveness in short yardage situations, scrapping the flanker T of '64 when the Sugar Bowl kings relied so heavily on the pass catching, faking and field goal kicking of flanker Doug Moreau.

Iowa goes I hoping it can muster some effective running to go with the record Gary Snook-Karl Noonan battery. On the opposite end of the scale Army will use some I, emphasizing more passing than the Cadet wing-T roll-out-or-rollover of '64.

Georgia Tech and Tennessee, once the single wing fortress, both will move from a split, flip-flop I, Penn State's defending Eastern (Lambert Trophy) champions will run some plays into a slot-T or single wing.

Other I converts include Stanford, Clemson, Miami of Ohio, Pitt, Rice, Bucknell and University of the Pacific.

Despite a general pass-consciousness around the country, Notre Dame's Ara Parseghan says the Irish will go from better than 50 per cent throwing a '64 down to about 30 percent because Heisman Trophy winning quarterback John Huarte and ace receiver Jack Snow are gone.

State Chances Public Areas

With Sam Hanna

Big Decision Upcoming

Louisiana deer hunters who stampede public officials into opposing the any-deer seasons are going to cause the state to lose its leases on public areas owned by the timber companies.

And if these same public officials don't start becoming leaders instead of followers, then the public game management areas are sure to go.

Where will the majority of our deer hunters be then? They'll be without a place to hunt, that's where.

The Wild Life & Fisheries Commission will meet Tuesday at New Orleans to consider or reconsider its decision on any-deer seasons scheduled in various spots around the state for the upcoming season.

Gov. John J. McKeithen told us on the phone Saturday morning that he doesn't favor doe seasons in areas where a great majority of the people oppose it. He cited his home parish of Caldwell as an example.

But what about the public areas owned by the timber companies that want the deer population kept in balance with timber growth? Who is to prevail here? The public or the land owner?

Take for example the biggest of the game management areas in Madison, Tensas and Franklin. That tract of land, consisting of over 100,000 acres, is owned by the Chicago Mill & Lumber Co. to grow timber — not big bucks.

Growing timber and game management go hand-in-hand, but there's not a timber company in the world that wants its young timber stand damaged by an overpopulation of game, including deer. You'll find some experts on the street corner who'll tell you deer won't damage timber, but all the foresters and biologists we've talked to say they will.

So, Chicago Mill, like all other timber companies, would like to see the game program run by the biologists.

For this reason, the company's chief forester in this area, L. C. White, has written the commission a letter requesting that the game program be kept in the commission's hands.

Note this sentence from Clark's letter:

"We are insisting that the recommendation of the deer harvest by game biologists be adhered to so as to maintain a balance between forest range and deer population."

What do you think Chicago Mill will do eventually if every year the game programs advocated by biologists are changed by public officials who can't stand the heat?

The state could lose its lease.

In Caldwell Parish, the game management area is owned by the Bodcaw Co. and although an any-deer season is not scheduled there this year the commission received a letter from W. M. Palmer Jr., Bodcaw vice president, reminding the commission that it was the commission's job to run the program.

Palmer said, "We are attempting to grow hardwood timber on this area and entered into a lease agreement with the commission with a verbal understanding that the deer herd would be controlled by managed hunts to the extend that little or no damage would occur to hardwood reproduction.

Doesn't he make it plain enough?

The trouble, of course, is that old game of polities. It's popular for some police jurors and state representatives and senators to clamor their opposition against the biologists. It sounds good to some people who don't know any better — some of whom can vote but can't read.

Our local citizens should compliment the Ouachita Parish Police Jury for taking the position it did in voting to support the commission's policy. The Tensas Police Jury has been down this road before and has asked for an any-deer season in Wards One and Two.

There'll come a time when the problem will be resolved in the valley between the Ouachita and the Mississippi — when the woods are gone. We can hurry that day by forcing the timber companies to cut into their profits.

But the hill country will be left and so the problem of running the game program on a biological basis rather than political will remain too.

And if the commission goes against its own biologists to satisfy a political problem, then they won't be acting right either.

Fishing, anyone?

The Mallard Ballard

The Wild Life & Fisheries Commission also will decide Tuesday on the duck season, if that's what you can call it after the U.S. Department of the Interior cut us to one mallard.

Frameworks for the 40-day season are October 9th to January 9th. Since the commission took a week away from North Louisiana in September on the dove season, perhaps they'll give North Louisiana the latest possible duck season.

That way the boys will stand a better chance of killing a lot of mallards.

Under the government's restrictions, the daily bag limit of ducks, other than mergansers, may not include more than two woodducks, two canvasbacks, one mallard and one pintail. That's a daily bag limit of four. Big deal.

In Louisiana south of U.S. 190, a daily bag limit of two scaup will be permitted. There will not be a season on Canada geese in Arkansas and Louisiana.

The limits on coots in the Mississippi Flyway will be 10 daily and 20 in possession. Mississippi Flyway state, including Louisiana, also may select a 70-day goose season from October 1st through January 15th with a daily bag limit of five.

Louisiana can select a split season, but will lose 10 days if it does.

The Central Flyway was cut to one mallard and one pintail also.

Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall, commenting on the reduction, said, "It is vital that we send an increased breeding population of mallards and pintails north next spring to take advantage of the improved nesting conditions in the continent's primary duck nesting area on the northern prairies."

As we pointed out in our column Friday, this view is contrary to that of the Louisiana commission, but it would be a waste of space to go into that now.

Louisiana and other Mississippi Flyway states lost the battle.

Now we hope the Louisiana commission will grant us the latest possible season.

The Little Man's Corner

The doves were ganging up and the fishing was getting hotter, but the little men made news afield.

Things have been popping at Black Bayou. Ken Kasperic, who lives near the lake, fishes it often, but he had an experience the other day that was new to him.

Ken and Shorty Bell were on the lake in a boat when a 5-foot rattlesnake with nine rattles came swimming by. Of course, they killed the snake and now Ken plans to have it mounted.

Rattlesnakes take to water, as Ken Kasperic learned.

Also, Louis Savana of Monroe was fishing in Black Bayou when a pack of wild dogs chased adoe deer out of the woods nearby. The deer took to water as Louis Savana looked on from his boat.

Catching fish at Black Bayou were Bobby Sadler, 100 bream, Roy Hinton, 60 specs and A. D. Parker Sr., 96 bream.

Still at Black Bayou, John Elmendorff reports that he's having trouble with his floating blinds. John is one duck hunter who says he'll continue to hunt despite the restrictions.

At any rate John tells us that somebody has been swiping the styrofoam from his floating blinds. Needless to say, he hopes they'll leave his property alone.

Down in the Jena area, Lonnie Poland of Jonesboro landed the limit of white perch in Kitterlin Creek Bay.

Claude Rinicker of Lake Providence caught 32 white perch in Old River. Carl Rinicker of Haynesville landed 20.

Ferriday fishermen Clifford Squire and Bob and J. W. LaPort and Marvin Walker all got the limit of bass in Lake Concordia. Also from Ferriday, Mr. and Mrs. Howell Whittington and Mrs. Carl Boykin got the limit of bream in Lake St. John. They were fishing with shrimp.

Meantime, September 4th marks the opening of the dove season and from all reports it should be a good one. We've talked to several people who report seeing more doves than ever.

That's just two weeks away.

Also, a lot of sportsmen are seeing gangs of small turkeys in the woods. So apparently it was a good hatch this summer. But come spring they'll be hard to find.

Locally, Capt. Jesse Peyton, former wildlife agent, is recovering from surgery at the St. Francis. He's doing well, but looking forward this week to going home to his place on the Tensas River.

Capt. Peyton, incidentally, tells us he's heard a panther in the Tensas Swamp.

Packers Bury Bears In 3rd Period Spurt

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Green Bay Packers scored three touchdowns in the second quarter Saturday and went on to bury the Chicago Bears 31-14 for their second successive National Football League exhibition victory.

A sell-out crowd of 47,006, a record for the annual Midwest Shrine game, watched the two teams match bruising defenses through the first period before the Packers marched 43 yards for their first touchdown.

Quarterback Bart Starr, Paul Hornung and Jim Taylor led the Packer offensive drive.

Green Bay scored twice more before the half ended, on short runs by Tom Moore and Elijah Pitts.

Green Bay added a 41-yard field goal by Don Chandler in the fourth period and scored again on an 80-yard pass from Zeke Bratkowski to Bob Long.

The Bears got two consolation touchdowns in the closing minutes of play with second-year quarterback Larry Rakestraw guiding both drives.

Rakestraw passed nine yards to rookie Dick Gordon with a little more than three minutes to play and his 46-yard toss to another rookie, Gale Sayers, set up the second touchdown that was scored by Ron Bull on a three-yard run.

Taylor scored the first Green Bay touchdown on a one-yard plunge after Starr had put the Packers in position with a 13-yard pass to Hornung.

A few moments late Moore scored from the one and then, just before the half ended, second-year quarterback Dennis Claridge came in to engineer a 56-yard drive that ended when Pitts scored from two yards.

Claridge, who figures prominently in Green Bay's future plans, completed a 16 yard pass to Long and scrambled for 25 yards himself on the drive. His second carry, 11 yards, set up the touchdown.

The Packers so dominated things in the first half that the Bears were able to get only two first downs and 34 yards passing and rushing. Green Bay, in that same time, picked up 191 yards in 15 first downs. Starr, who completed 12 of 21 passes, was named the game's most valuable player on offense. Willie Wood, who intercepted one Bears' pass and returned a punt 24 yards to set up the Packers' first touchdown, was named the game's outstanding defensive player by sportswriters and broadcasters.

Gold-Dust Twins Put To Shame By Bills, 30-14

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills turned New York's gold-dust quarterback twins — John Huarte and Joe Namath — into poor little rich boys and routed the Jets 30-14 Saturday in an American Football League exhibition.

Huarte, the 1964 Heisman Trophy winner from Notre Dame, was given a violent reception by the defending AFL champs as he made his first start of the exhibition season.

Huarte completed only 2 of 11 passes for a scant 20 yards as he played the entire first half. Two of his passes were intercepted and turned into Buffalo touchdowns.

Huarte missed his first five passes and was able to direct the Jets to only one first down.

Namath, the $400,000 rookie from Alabama, fared little better. He completed only 6 of 24 passes for 72 yards and had two intercepted.

Buffalo Coach Lou Saban started his No. 2 quarterback, Daryle Lamonica, who preceded Huarte at Notre Dame by three years. Lamonica connected for touchdown passes of 27 and 5 yards to Charley Ferguson.

Held's Home Run In Eight Inning Defeats Indians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Woodie Held smashed a two-out, two-run homer in the eighth inning Saturday, giving the Washington Senators a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

It was the second time in 18 hours that the Senators beat the Indians with late-inning heroics. Dick Nen clouted a game-winning homer Friday night with two out in the ninth.

Held's 14th home run made a losing pitcher of Steven Hargan, 21-year old rookie making his second start for the Indians. Howie Koplitz, working in relief of Mike McCormick, was the winner.

The Indians scored in the first inning off McCormick on Chico Salmon's double and a run-scoring single by Rocky Colavito.

11th Inning Single Nets Reds' 2-1 Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Leo Cardenas' run-scoring single followed a leadoff double by Johnny Edwards in the 11th inning Saturday and gave the Cincinnati Reds a tense 2-1 victory over Philadelphia.

Edwards started the rally against reliever Jack Balschun with his two-base hit off the scoreboard in left center. Cardenas' hit then sent in pinch runner Chico Ruiz with the winning run.

Cincinnati threatened to pile it on when southpaw Bo Belinsky gave up one-out walks to Tommy Harper and Pete Rose, but the Phils turned Vada Pinson's grounder into a double play.

The pitching victory went to a Phillie nemesis, Joe Nuxhall, who went 10 innings and allowed five hits — including Richie Allen's tying homer with two out in the ninth. Bill McCool pitched the 11th for the Reds.

Nuxhall is 23-10 lifetime against the Phils and 4-0 this year.

Culp retired the next two batters, but Pete Rose lashed a double for his third hit of the day, sending in Cardenas.

Baldschun's sensational clutch pitching held off the Reds in the 10th. He struck out three straight batters after a walk to Pete Rose and Vada Pinson's single put men on first and third with none out. Johnson opened the last of the 10th with a single, but Nuxhall fanned the next two batters — giving him 11 strikeouts — and Bobby Wine grounded out.

Boston Red Sox Power Way Past Tigers By 13-10

BOSTON (AP) — Tony Conigliaro and Tony Horton collected six hits, drove in seven runs and scored six between them, powering Boston to a 13-10 victory over Detroit Saturday night.

Each had three hits and scored three times. Conigliaro knocked in four runs and Horton three.

Conigliaro doubled in a run in the four-run first inning before Horton unloaded his third homer. In the fourth Conigliaro singled in Carl Yastrzemski and scored as Horton tripled. Horton eventually came home on a force play.

The Red Sox put the game away with a five-run outburst in the fifth. Felix Mantilla singled across the first two runs of the inning and scored on Conigliaro's 22nd homer. Hotron followed with a single and eventually raced home on Bob Tillman's single.

Koufax Aims At Pitching Records

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Koufax must feel like a kid who has been given a choice of a dozen presents for his birthday. The Los Angeles' Dodgers' southpaw has a chance at so many pitching records, he can't make up his mind which he wants the most.

It's a safe bet, though, that Sandy would settle for the honor of being the major league's first 30-game winner in 31 years since that would greatly enhance the Dodgers' chances of winning the National League pennant.

With 21 victories in the bag and at least 10 more starts coming up, Koufax is still in the running.

Koufax has a better chance, however, of breaking Bob Feller's major league single season strikeout record of 348 set by the Cleveland fireballer in 1946.

Sandy already has registered 288, averaging about 10 strikeouts per game. At this rate, he figures to have no trouble establishing a modern strikeout mark.

Koufax already is the first National League pitcher to strike out 200 or more batters in four consecutive seasons. His 306 in 1963 is the modern National League record.

With 248 innings under his belt, Koufax has no chance to overtake Rube Waddell, holder of the modern record for most innings pitched in a season by a left-hander. Waddell hurled 384 innings for the 1904 Philadelphia Athletics.

Sandy, however, has a chance to top Robin Roberts' 347 innings for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1953. That's the National League high since Grover Alexander hurled 363 innings for the Phillies in 1920.

In this era of relief specialists and pampered pitchers, it is noteworthy that at least half a dozen pitchers have a chance to reach 300 innings this year.

Besides Koufax, there are Don Drysdale, 239, of the Dodgers; Juan Marichal, 234, of the San Francisco Giants; Mel Stottlemyre, 223, of the New York Yankees; Bob Gibson, 219, of the St. Louis Cardinals; Larry Jackson, 216, of the Chicago Cubs, and Claude Osteen, 215, of the Dodgers.

The only active major league pitchers who have hit 300 innings in one season are Koufax, Drysdale, Marichal, Roberts, Warren Spahn and Bob Friend. Roberts has done it six times. Drysdale three times and Spahn twice.

Roberts Wins 3rd Straight As Cubs Fall

CHICAGO (AP) — Robin Roberts' shutout string came to an end Saturday but the rejuvenated 38-year-old right-hander had enough to pitch the Houston Astros to a 9-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Roberts, who blanked Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in his other two starts since returning to the National League this month, ran his string of scoreless innings to 24 before the Cubs scored two runs in the seventh.

By then, however, Roberts was coasting along as the Astros backed him with six runs, including two-run homers by Frank Thomas in the first inning and Jim Wynn in the third.

Houston picked up two more in the sixth on a walk, a double by Ken Aspromonte, Rusty Staub's pinch sacrifice fly and Lee Maye's run-scoring single.

The Astros put it beyond reach in the eighth with three more runs on Bob Lillis' two-run double and Wynn's sacrifice fly.

Roberts, who had a 5-7 record with Baltimore, this season before being cut loose, was touched for nine hits.

USL To Host World Trampoline Games

LAFAYETTE (Special)—The 1966 World Trampoline and Tumbling Games will be hosted by the University of Southwestern Louisiana, according to President Joel L. Fletcher and athletic director A. G. (Whitey) Urban.

Tentative dates for the 14-nation event next spring are set for April 28-29-30, and the competition is to be held here in Lafayette's Blackham Coliseum.

World tites are to be decided in the men's and women's trampoline division, the men's and women's synchronized trampoline, and the men's and women's tumbling.

This marks the first time ever that this world championship event has been held in the United States. For the past two years the tournament was held in London, Eng.

"The University of Southwestern Louisiana is proud to have been chosen as host for the 1966 World's Championship trampoline and tumbling games," Dr. Fletcher stated. "This singular honor further demonstrates the continuing growth and recognition of Southwestern's splendid athletic program."

"The University is delighted in being able to bring these Games to the United States and welcomes the opportunity thus presented to help bolster international athletics relationships," Urban added.

USL gymnastics coach Jeff Hennessy represented Southwestern at the International Trampoline Federation meeting held in Basel, Switzerland. Hennessy submitted USL's bid for Games, and he also presented his rules and regulations for trampolining that were adopted by the international group.

Hennessy was representing the United States as national chairman of the AAU Trampoline and Tumbling Committee.

The field for the 1966 world meet will consist of four athletes (two men and two women) from each nation, plus coaches for each team. Trials to decide U.S. entries are scheduled at Sarasota, Florida, next December.

The International Trampoline Federation, composed of 14 nations, seeks to add the trampoline and tumbling events to the Olympic agenda. However, at least 25 nations are now required to constitute an Olympic event.

USL officials added that the Amateur Athletic Union is presently negotiating for national television rights to the 1966 event in Lafayette, and these developments are to be announced at a later date.

Mets Withstand Inevitable With Win Over Cards

NEW YORK (AP) —The New York Mets rushed in three first inning runs, then rallied behind Jack Fisher and held off the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 Saturday, averting—at least temporarily—another Met record in reverse.

The victory snapped a four-game losing string for the 10th place Mets, was their second in 13 starts against St. Louis, and only their third in 18 games.

It also allowed them to escape, for the moment, another dismal record. They are tied with the 1938-41 Phillies for the most losses over a four-year period, 425. One more loss and the record is theirs alone.

Fisher,the Mets' top winner at 8-16, spaced eight hits about as well as he could, and, staked to the three-run burst in the first, never trailed.

A single by Ron Hunt and walks to Johnny Lewis and Ron Swoboda filled the bases. Another walk to Ed Kranepool forced in one and Joe Christopher's single delivered two more.

Fisher and Chris Cannizzaro singled in runs in the third and Charley Smith's single after Roy MacMillan's double got another in the sixth.

The Cards' runs came on Dick Groat's walk, an infield out and Bill White's single in the fourth, and a double by Lou Brock and a single by Groat in the eighth.

Former West Point Football Players Tell Viet Nam Story

BIEN HOA, Viet Nam (AP) — "When the going gets tough the tough get going."

Quarterback Dick Eckert picked up the football battle cry at West Point during his playing days. Former Coach Dale Hall had it posted all over the locker room.

First Lieutenant Dick Eckert of Carlisle, Pa., who graduated from the Military Academy in 1963, never has forgotten the motto in the tough war against the Viet Cong. Eckert, who received the purple heart after being slightly wounded by a hand grenade, recalled the motto in discussing the war during an interview.

He and three other former West Point football players are stationed here with the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

The others are Capt. Tom Blanda of Youngwood, Pa., class of 1961, and brother of veteran professional star George Blanda; Capt. Dick Bruckner, of New York, class of 1961; and 2nd Lt. Jim Koster of Lake Benton, Minn., class of 1964.

All have the same fighting spirit here as they did on the football field. And the grim war, which Bruckner calls a "dirty war," has not dampened their sense of humor.

Blanda, 25, also a former quarterback, often joked through an interview.

Once, when asked how he met his wife, he replied, with tongue-in-cheek: "She happened to be at the right place at the right time."

Eckert, Blanda, Bruckner and Koster have been at this air base, located about 12 miles north of Saigon, since May 12 when the 173rd was deployed here from Okinawa. All except Eckert, who is a bachelor had to leave their wives in Okinawa. Koster's wife is expecting a child next month.

Blanda said that in 1963, just before he left for Okinawa, the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League made him an offer.

He turned it down, he said, because "I enjoyed being with the 173rd and what I was doing."

Eckert is in command of a weapons platoon in the 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry. Blanda and Bruckner are battery artillery commanders and Koster is a fire direction officer.

At least two other former West Point athletes, 1st. Lt. Ronald L. Zinn and 1st. Lt. Bob Fuellhart have been killed in action in Viet Nam.

Zinn, also a member of the 173rd, was killed in a battle with the Viet Cong in Zone D last July 7. Fuellhart, a football teammate of both Eckert and Blanda, was killed less than two weeks ago while directing a helicopter attack near the village of Phung Heip.

Fuellhart played the "lonely" end position in the football offense directed by Blanda and Eckert. Zinn finished sixth in the 20 kilometer walk in the 1964 Olympic Games, the best an American ever has done in a walking event.

Eckert, 24, who volunteered for duty in Viet Nam last January before it was known the 173rd would be moved here, recalled the big battle when American, Vietnamese and Australian troops ran into a well fortified Viet Cong village.

We had four killed and 11 wounded said Eckert. We estimated that we killed around 20 Viet Cong. We pushed the Viet Cong unit out of the village.

The village had a lot of tunnels and trenches and blood trails leading out of all of them. The Viet Cong dragged out their wounded and dead.

I shot one sniper in a tree. He fell out of the tree but we never found him later. Twice the Viet Cong came out of the trenches and assaulted us. We threw grenades. We saw people drop. Again they pulled them back into the trenches.

"Zinn was the platoon leader of the lead rifle platoon.

"We were right behind them. When all the firing opened up, we couldn't figure what it was. So we went forward and came to within 10 feet of Zinn. He was already dead.

"He was hit with the initial fire. The Viet Cong kept hitting him with machine gun bullets. Snipers were up in the trees. While we were organizing, there was sniper fire and sporadic machine gun fire from the enemy.

"The company commander moved the left platoon around to try to get around to the rear of the village. They ran into a machine gun. They put heavy fire on it and knocked this machine gun out. Armed helicopters put on heavy fire. Then we attacked and swept through the village."

Eckert and Zinn were personal friends.

"It (Zinn's death) is one of those things you expect to happen but you never expect it to be the person next to you. I really didn't think or comprehend it until it was all over and I had a chance to relax.

"After it was all over I started to think about his family. He had just gotten married. While it (the battle) is going on, you just accept it as part of the battle."

Eckert received his purple heart for being wounded in the upper part of his leg during an earlier operation, also in Zone D. He was interrogating one of the villagers, when another man came up behind him and flipped a hand grenade. The grenade turned out to be sort of a dud. Eckert hit the ground, and the men escaped into the woods.

Eckert, who succeeded Blanda as first string quarterback in 1961, said that actually there is a plot in common in playing sports and being here in battle.

"There's the same tension," he explained, "the same feeling. All the training is like practicing in sports. You've got to train. You develop the same type of team work that you do in battle. When the going gets tough, the tough get going."

Eighth Graders Asked To Report To Lee Practice

All eighth grade boys interested in playing football at Lee Junior High should report to the school gymnasium at 9 a.m. Monday, Van Leigh, coach of the Eagles, announced Saturday.

Seventh grade boys are asked to report next week at an exact time and date to be announced later.

Leigh urged the boys reporting to bring birth certificates with them. He said he expects about 45 eighth graders and will hold an organizational meeting Monday morning and first practice at 5 p.m.

Bob Knoop, of the Los Angeles Angels led American League second basemen in double plays last season, participating in 123.

Carpet Gyps Are Busy Over Nation

"WALL-TO-WALL nylon carpet . . . . 2 rooms plus hall or stairway . . . . Complete with padding and custom installation . . . . $119."

"Three rooms of wall-to-wall carpeting . . . . Free tickets to a Broadway show and a free vacuum cleaner . . . . All for $115."

"Wall-to-wall carpet . . . . Living room, dining room, completely installed . . . . This is not junk carpet. First quality only. . . .Free measure and decorator service . . . . $88."

These and hundreds of similar ads which have appeared across the U.S. in recent months have brought on a storm of anguished complaints from consumers and a rash of warnings by Better Business Bureaus the nation over. They are typical of the "bait and switch" racketeers, who, according to Irving Genett, editor of "Floor Covering Weekly" and a major campaigner against carpet frauds, "Know nothing about carpeting, but every trick in the book in making a sale — often at a price many times the carpet's value."

ONE NEW JERSEY victim reported paying $2,064 for a carpet worth $650. Another shelled out $3,000 for a small carpet valued at a few hundred dollars.

Another, who paid $1,010 for her carpeting less than a year ago (six times the price estimated by a reputable local dealer) reported last month that the carpet was already "worn, pattern gone."

Carpets today are among the biggest home-furnishing investments a homeowner makes. In 1964 alone, carpet sales totaled about $1.5 billion and sales are expected to more than double in the next decade. A new range of inexpensive carpets has arrived in the market, bringing prices within reach of millions of modest-income families.

The "bait and switch" racket is probably the most widespread in carpet selling. You respond to a come-on ad offering rooms of carpeting, completely installed, for $100 or so. A high-pressure salesman arrives and immediately down-grades the carpet his company advertised. Sample remarks made by a fast-buck salesman to a "detective" planted by the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York: "If you take it up, you will have to resand your floors." "Be careful how you vacuum it — it will run like a silk stocking from the corners." "With baseboard heating like you have, it will crumple right up and won't last six months."

THE SALESMAN has instructions to sell NOT the low-priced carpet to you but some other, vastly overpriced product. If you insist on buying the $100 range carpeting, he simply refuses to sell.

Another type of carpet gypster advertises "industrial" or "commerical" carpeting at bargain prices — claiming that the carpet is left over from a big job in a hotel or office building and that such carpeting wears longer than regular covering. As it turns out, you may end up paying the gypster up to three times the price you would pay at your local store for the same stuff. "The fact is," says one industry expert, "that there is no established commercial standard and seldom is there enough carpeting left over from a commerical installation to cover an average sized bathroom."

Here's how to spot the gypsters:

(1) BEWARE OF ads that offer an "astonishingly low" price. You just can't carpet three rooms with lasting covering for less than $100.

(2) Beware of the salesman who tries to switch you from his company's advertised special. Bait-and-switch techniques are outlawed in most states, but enforcement of the law is defiantly difficult.

(3) Ask for a sample of the carpet to be installed, or at least make sure the same carpet is actually delivered.

(4) Beware of "free" offers along with "bargain" carpeting. The offers aren't free and the racketeers gyp you on these too.

(5) Deal with an established, reputable dealer. "This," says Genett, "is the only way to be sure you are getting fair value for your money and that you are getting the many real bargains in carpeting available today."

Kay Thompson, Harvey Parnell Perry Wed In Candlelight Setting Saturday

Pedestal jardinieres holding fan shaped arrangements of all white gladioli, stock, agapanthus, California daisies and roses against a background of myriad lighted tapers formed a setting in Parkview Baptist Church for the wedding Saturday, August 21 of Miss Kay Thompson and Harvey Parnell Perry.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dhu Thompson, 1410 Speed Drive, Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John William Perry of Perryville.

Branched candelabra entwined with Southern smilax formed an arch of lighted tapers with palm trees at either side of the altar. Smilax and magnolia foliage garlanded the chancel rail to complete the setting for the 7 p.m. ceremony performed by Rev. James R. Edwards.

Mrs. William W. Wilkerson rendered an organ prelude as the candles were lighted by Dhu Charles Thompson, nephew of the bride and Julian Stamper Thompson Jr., Delhi, her cousin. Soloist for the ceremony was Mrs. Joe W. Caskey.

Wearing a regal gown of white silk organza veiled over taffeta, the bride was escorted by her father who gave her in marriage. Hand - run Alencon lace created a scalloped Sabrina neckline and extended to the natural waistline of the bodice. Lace motifs on French net appliqued the elbow length sleeves. She wore matching shoes and short white gloves and a turquoise silk bow headpiece. Her basket of feathered carnations was accented by blue ribbons.

Mr. Perry attended his son as best man. Ushers included Paul Harvey, John Rea, John Perry, brother of the groom; John Blackman, Bishop Johnston III and Terry Miller, Baton Rouge.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Thompson wore a floor length gown of sky blue crepe with overblouse of Chantilly lace featuring a flowing back effect. Mrs. Perry, mother of the groom, wore a floor length sheath of mauve silk with low cowl neckline and flared hem. Her headpiece was a mauve silk organza ring with self fabric petals and she wore matching shoes and white gloves with a corsage of white cymbidium orchids.

An arrangement of bridal flowers was also placed on a table inside the entrance. Music for the occasion was furnished by Les Winslow and his ensemble.

Twin arrangements of white gladioli, stock, agapanthus, California daisies and roses on pedestals against palm trees stood on either side of the receiving line and an antique seven branched brass candelabra holding white tapers was placed on a table near the ballroom entrance.

The reception table, covered with a full length cloth of white satin, was centered with a cherub compote with crystal prisms holding a mass of white stock, daisies, tuberoses and pink roses, flanked by five branched silver candelabra holding white tapers. In the foyer of the church an arrangement of white and yellow gladioli and killian daisies was flanked by tall green and yellow topiary trees.

White tapers in wrought iron candelabra, decorated with magnolia foliage which filled the choir loft cast a soft glow over white beauty baskets of white and yellow gladioli and daisies. Smilax garlanded the choir rail and forming a background for the ceremony was an arch of greenery and flowers behind a prie dieu.

Rev. T. Earl Ogg officiated at the ceremony at 3 p.m. Mrs. Claude Dillingham, organist, rendered appropriate selections and accompanied the vocalist, Max Dillingham.

Wearing a traditional gown of ivory cloud silk taffeta, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The fitted bodice with bateau neckline featured a yoke and elbow sleeves of re-embroidered Alencon lace. Appliques of the lace defined the waistline and were scattered over the full skirt, from which back pleats formed a wide chapel train. Her veil of ivory silk illusion was held by a crown of pearls and she carried a cascade of yellow roses and stephanotis.

Miss Linda Adams, maid of honor, wore a sleeveless scoop necked dress of yellow crepe accented by a moss green velvet belt. Her yellow wedding ring hat was set in yellow illusion and completing her costume were yellow shoes and a cascade bouquet of white roses with garlands of ivy. Bridesmaids, Misses Elaine Hanna, Malinda Mabray and Debbie Harrison, wore dresses of yellow peau de soie with moss green velvet belts with matching wedding ring hats set in illusion and matching shoes. They carried nosegays of white roses and ivy garlands.

A reception was held following the ceremony in Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's tiered wedding cake and punch bowl were at either end. A gold floor length cloth covered the groom's table with twin gold candelabra at either side of the chocolate groom's cake.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Johnny Sheppard and small son, Colby, presided at the guest book. Mrs. Sheppard wore a turquoise chiffon long-sleeved gown while her son wore a turquoise checked linen suit. Out - of - town guests were entertained at a coffee hour in the home of the bride's parents following the reception.

The couple will be at home in Monroe and will attend Northeast State College in the fall. Mr. Harrison is associated in the sales department with Sun Lighting Fixtures. The bride attended Hockaday School for Girls in Dallas and graduated from Neville high. Mr. Harrison is also a Neville graduate.

'Total Look' Makes Wardrobe

All these years the average woman has been frustrated in attaining the well-dressed look by being able to find easily the right accessories. So it's ironic that the sportswear field should at last have come up with what the ready-to-wear people have never been able to manage.

This fall's "total look" is nothing more nor less than wardrobe planning. Sportswear houses are providing all the components of a costume from head to toe. Some are sending out fashion experts to show store staffs how to sell.

Milliners Now Selling Wigs

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Shed a tear for the glories of millinery. It seems many a hat department these days has descended to carrying wigs to make ends meet.

Stores are finding that if women don't wear hats in summer, they will wear wigs, especially if they're not too high priced. They like the instant disguise of summer - wrecked hair and the idea that they can change the color of their hair at will.

This latter motive leads many women to buy two wigs, one in their natural hair color, the other blonde. A few of the more daring purchase red-haired wigs but blonde shades are the overwhelming favorites.

Wig makers these days advertise to millinery buyers as well as to cosmetics buyers. Can a wig be regarded as a sort of hat? It would seem so, since at least one top designer has been doing what she calls wig hats, froths of tulle that look rather like hair.

MRS. THOMAS ANTHONY GALANTOWICZ

Mary Knotts Becomes Bride Of New York Man

Vows uniting in marriage Miss Mary Knotts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Knotts of Wisner and Thomas Anthony Galantowicz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albin S. Galantowicz of Buffalo, N. Y., were solemnized Saturday, August 21 at 4 p.m. in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Winnsboro.

The Rev. Daniel Corkery officiated at the double ring ceremony. On the altar were arrangements of white gladioli and stock with pompons and large white chrysanthemums. Matching arrangements in large baskets banked the altar.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of pure silk crystaline with an overblouse of scalloped Flemish lace featuring short sleeves and high neckline. The slim skirt fell into folds forming a modified chapel train. Her short veil of English illusion was held in place by a small pillbox of lace and seed pearls. She carried a white missal crested with a white orchid and sprays of stephanotis.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. Gary Newchurch. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Walter S. Knotts, Mrs. Bobby Dean and Mrs. James Duncan. They wore identical floor length gowns of chiffon over taffeta with yellow skirts and white bodices. The empire waistlines were defined by ivy green velvet ribbon and their headdresses were circular veils attached to chiffon bows in matching yellow. They carried nosegays of yellow and white pompons.

Ted Galantowicz attended his brothers as best man. Groomsmen were Edward Prozeller, Robert Appel and John Knotts. Walter Knotts and Gary Newchurch assisted as ushers.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a street length sheath of shell pink Schiffli embroidered organdy with matching accessories and a green cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother chose a powder blue costume suit with beaded ring collar, black accessories and a pink cymbidium orchid corsage.

The bride's table was covered with yellow net over white linen and held the tiered wedding cake, served by Mrs. Joe Baughman, cousin of the bride and Mrs. Daniel McMahon, her aunt. A sliver compote of yellow gladioli and white chrysanthemums and a silver candelabra holding yellow tapers, entwined with ivy completed the decor. Alternating at the bride's book were Miss Nancy Knotts and Miss Sue Gambrell. Tea girls were Misses Carrol Kennerly, Cecile and Sharon Brewer, Mary Warner and Mary Gail Huckaby. Assisting with the courtesies were Mrs. W. A. Tucker, Mrs. Zollie Meadows, Mrs. E. A. Kiper and Mrs. Rufus Knight.

Following a wedding trip to the Smokies and Washington D. C. the couple will be at home in Columbus, Ohio, where Mr. Galantowicz will continue his graduate studies at Ohio State University.

Your Problems

Youth's Letters Could Create 'Fire Hazard'

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl, 18 years old. Although most of my friends consider me quite sophisticated because I have traveled around the world a lot (I am an Army brat) I realize I still have a lot to learn.

Several months ago I dated a fellow who was very popular at school. Terry took a summer job in New Mexico working for a relative who has pecan orchards. Since Terry has been away I have received 14 letters from him. (I have written him four.)

His letters are so torrid I tear them up the minute I finish reading them. I'd just die if anyone in the family should accidentally get hold of one. We never went beyond kissing but to read Terry's letters a person would think I was make-out for sure.

I do want him to write to me, Ann, but I don't care to receive any more red-hot mail. He's a sensitive person and I don't want to hurt his feelings. Please tell me what to do.—SUGAR PUSS (HIS NAME FOR ME.)

Dear Sugar: Tell Terry his letters are a fire hazard around the house and that you are worried that they might ignite some members of the family.

Make it clear that you do want him to write, but that you'd appreciate it if he'd tone down the love talk.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a young woman in my middle 20's who has been dating a man 29. After an evening at the movies, bridge, bowling, or just visiting with friends Rodney wants to sit in the car in front of my place and chat awhile, no matter how late it is.

I don't mind, except he always falls asleep in the middle of what I think is an interesting conversation. Last night he did this for the 15th time, so I decided to teach him a lesson. I got out of the car and left him there.

When I woke up this morning to go to work (at 6:30 a.m.) I looked out the window and he was sound asleep at the wheel. I dashed out in my bathrobe and woke him up. He was furious with me for not waking him up last night and sending him home. Do you feel this was my fault or his?—VALERIE

Dear Valerie: A person asleep in a car is easy prey for a hold-up or worse. You should not have left him there.

Married on her parents' 25th wedding anniversary was Miss Margie Judith Holley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd Holley, of Bastrop, who became the bride of Thomas Hall Burford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall Burford of Gloster, La., on Friday, August 20.

Miss Minnett Holley, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Lyn Holley, also her sister and Miss Barbara Burford, sister of the groom. Candles were lighted by Boyd Holley, brother of the bride, and Jack Wallace.

Mr. Burford served as his son's best man and groomsmen-ushers were Jeff Burford, brother of the groom; Parker Griffin, Jimmey Burford and Tom Griffith, his cousins.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Holley received guests wearing an avocado green silk model with matching shoes and velvet circlet hat and corsage of cymbidium orchids in matching shade. The groom's mother wore a celery green silk linen and chiffon model with small hat of leaves in shades of green and brown, celery shoes and a matching cymbidium orchid corsage.

The bride's cake table was covered with a white linen cloth bordered with lace and the punch table, covered with an imported cutwork cloth, was centered with an arrangement of pink gladioli and white chrysanthemums. Similar arrangements were used with greenery and potted plants about the house.

Minute Soup Now On Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — Minute soup may be on the way. It's made by dehydration via radiation. Scientists believe radiation will make dried vegetables absorb water more quickly.

Several major firms are working on the development. If they succeed, the preparation time from the present 10 minutes will go down to 60 seconds.

MRS. SAMUEL PATTERSON BOYD

Autumn Theme Prevails At Winnsboro Wedding

A candlelight ceremony in the First Methodist Church of Winnsboro on Saturday, August 21 at 7:30 p.m. united in marriage Miss Margaret Louise Mays, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dallas Mays and Donnie Leon Ellerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Excelle Ellerman, all of Winnsboro.

Candles were lighted by the groom's brother, Dan Ellerman and his cousin, Miss Kay Carpenter, who wore a formal Empire gown of green linen, a matching Dior bow headdress and a corsage of fall flowers.

The home of the bride's parents was scene of a reception following the wedding. Noted throughout the area were stylized arrangements of flowers in the bridal theme. Guests were invited to register by Misses Katherine and Alice Calhoun, cousins of the bride. The guest book table was enhanced by a lemon yellow taper and flowers in a crystal globe.

Right Glove For Each Costume

Accessories continue their fashion importance, and gloves must be young and sassy for sportswear, demure for Mod Victorianism, elegantly jeweled for those one-shoulder gowns.

Textured nylons look like lizard, python or ostrich, newest entries in the snakeskin looks. In knits there are motorcycle cuffed gloves, often with matching strapped helmets, or big mittens in gay knit stripes with a knit tam to match.

Lengths are important, as long sleeves come in again, calling for shorties, but most suits need the four-button glove, and the new one-shoulder gowns call for long and elegantly trimmed gloves.

Colors include topaz, gray and wine, but it's white for evening, often with jeweled embroidery done in India, from whence came the sari gown.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Williams of Clayton of the engagement of their niece, Miss Ginny Bruce to Wayne Brown, Shreveport, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Brown of Sarepta. The wedding will take place September 4 at 6 p.m. in the Methodist Church at Clayton.

For social affairs in Monroe, this has been a busy week indeed. Out of town visitors, long-awaited and highly cherished, have been entertained at a gay succession of daily parties.

It's been a real house party in the South Grand street residence of ANNA SLAGLE and MAE WOOTEN. Their guests were ANGIE MEREDITH (Mrs. John) WOOTEN of Shreveport; and Anna's granddaughters, PATTY PIERSON and ANNE PIERSON of Alexandria.

Angie, a former Monroe resident, spent the week reminiscing with old friends. On Tuesday afternoon, Anna invited some twenty of these for a conversational hour at home. An all-green arrangement of pears, grapes, and ivy decorated the table. A choice of coffee or punch was offered, with dainty sandwiches and sweets.

Wednesday at noon, FRANCES MONTGOMERY was hostess for luncheon at the Lotus club. Four guests were invited for the informal affair. . . Later that afternoon, ELLEN ABINGTON and BOBBIE BUIE entertained with a sherry party in the Abington home, honoring Angie. The table was centered with a silver epergne filled with Rose of Montana. Twenty-five guests shared this occasion.

Luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club was the compliment planned by ELIZABETH ABINGTON for Angie. Eight guests were seated at a white-covered table in the Garden Room. Centerpiece was a green container with yellow and white daisy mums. Green glasses completed the appointments. The salad plate included a melon half filled with fresh fruit and topped with honey and poppy-seed dressing. Hot cheese logs were passed, and creme de menthe parfait completed the menu.

Meanwhile, Patty and Ann were being entertained at parties attended by members of the high school set. Fifty-five girls, sophomores, juniors, and seniors, attended the morning party given by Anna for her granddaughters last Saturday morning.

On Monday, MARY LOU MYATT was hostess for luncheon . . . MERILYN WOOD invited eight for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club on Wednesday . . . The club was also scene of BETSY TAYLOR's luncheon on Thursday. Eight guests were seated at a table covered with a chartreuse cloth and centered with white and yellow chrysanthemums arranged with lemons . . . MARIANNE SALISBURY entertained with a conversational hour at her home on Friday morning.

Here from Dallas is ERNESTINE (Mrs. Carl M.) HILL, who is visiting DOT MERE DITH and CLIO and DICK BRIGHT in their home on Emerson street. She arrived Monday, is to be here through the coming week.

Clio invited thirty ladies to meet Ernestine at an afternoon party Tuesday. Bouquets of pink roses used with Rose of Montanta decorated the entrance and living room. The hostess was assisted by TIBB CHAPMAN and CAROLINE McBEE.

The dining table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a footed silver bowl holding Tropicana roses, green Fuji mums, and fresh green grapes. With iced drinks, the hostess offered a choice of eggplant antipasto, guacamole, cheese dip, shrimp remoulade, open faced sandwiches, and cheese dollars.

Other parties planned for Ernestine this week have been supper Thursday night with MARY ETTA and TRAVIS BROWN at their camp on D'Arbonne . . . luncheon and bridge with ALLYNE PETTY Friday at Bayou DeSiard country club . . . dinner that evening with MARGUERITE and I. C. DAVIS . . . and luncheon yesterday with CHRISTINE GRAY . . . Ernestine and the Brights are to be guests of JANE and E. L. HOLLOWAY for dinner today at Bayou DeSiard country club.

Former Monroyan and popular guest MARY LAVINIA INABNET McLENDON leaves today after a week's visit with relatives here. On Thursday, Mary Lavinia was complimented with luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club. Her mother, WILHEMINIA INABNET, and sister-in-law, NORA MARIE INABNET, were hostesses for the party in the Garden room. Ten guests were seated at a table centered with a bouquet of mixed summer garden flowers.

Others who entertained for Mary Lavinia were CAROLYN SHELTON, who invited a group for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club on Tuesday . . . JEANNE MYATT, who entertained at home on Wednesday . . . and BETTY and JIMMY MOORE, hosts for a boat-ride on the river Friday evening.

And speaking of the Moores, Betty and Jimmy, with their son JAMES and daughter CHRISTINE, returned the first of the week from an exciting eight-day trip to Mexico. They flew to Mexico City, and there hired a car and driver for sight-seeing. It must have been Old Home Week south of the Border: at Sunday's bullfights, the Moores encountered HAZEL MITCHELL, and later, former Monroyans THELMA and LEROY STERN, honeymooning in Mexico.

Now in Northbrook, Illinois, is LEIGH RUSSELL, who is visiting her sister, MARSHALL SKINNER and family. En route to Illinois, Leigh stopped in Louisville, Kentucky, to see another former Monroyan, SUZANNE SOLOMON.

First of the back-to-school parties was held Tuesday, when ZANONA FLINN entertained complimentary to MERRIE JO SIMONTON, soon to leave for University of Southwestern Louisiana in Lafayette; and KAY ADAMS, who is to enter Louisiana Tech. The luncheon was held on the porch of Bayou DeSiard country club. The green-covered table was centered with a footed silver bowl filled with white vinca. Fourteen guests attended.

Zanona herself left Friday for a visit with her daughter and son-in-law, ANN and HALL PEYTON, in South Dartmouth, Massachusetts. She plans to be away about two weeks.

Celebrating her tenth birthday Saturday, SADYE BERNHEIM invited twenty-five young friends for a swim and back-yard cookout at her home, 30 Kathy Lane. After a swim, each guest received a personalized comb as a favor. Supper included barbecued hamburgers and hot dogs, along with ice cream and birthday cake.

Home again after a trip East are ALICE and BILL ALLEMAN, daughter ANN and son MARK. They visited Washington, D.C., and the New York World's Fair. In Madison, Connecticut, they were guests of ALICE and JACK PEAT, former Monroyans, in their home there. The Allemans returned home by way of Niagara Falls.

Members of Lt. Joseph Bowmar Society, Children of the American Revolution, are attending the Southeastern Regional Meeting of the organization, being held this weekend at the Inn of the Six Flags, Arlington, Texas. Representing the local society are BECKY HUENEFELD, PAULA MEEK, CHRISTINE MOORE, BO SHAW, LIL SHAW, BETSY TAYLOR, and RICK TAYLOR . . . Betsy is serving as personal page to MRS. NILE E. FAUST, senior national president of C.A.R.

Invitations were in the mail last week for a tea to be held this coming Thursday, August 26, honoring Monroe's own LUCILLE TURPIN. Lucille, who is president general of the National Society, Colonial Dames XVII Century, is being honored by her own chapter, Edward Doty, at the home of MRS. JOSEPH ANDREWS DAVENPORT in Mer Rouge, between the hours of four and six.

Members of Monroe's Prarie des Canots chapter, Colonial Dames XVII Century, were invited to Thursday's tea, along with Daughters of the American Revolution of this area. DAR Societies included were Monroe's Ft. Miro; Bastrop's Abram Morehouse and General William Montgomery Societies; and West Monroe's Chief Tusquahoma.

Our poem today, "The Leal", by Dorothy Parker:

The friends I made have slipped and strayed,
And who's the one that cares?
A trifling lot and best forgot—
That's my tale, and theirs.
Then if my friendships break and bend,
There's little need to cry
The while I know that every foe
Is faithful till I die.

MRS. DONALD KENT SWITZER

Switzer-White Vows Read In Crossett Chapel

The marriage of Miss Linda Carole White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin White and Donald Kent Switzer, son of Frank Switzer and the late Mrs. Switzer was solemnized Sunday, August 15 at 2:30 p.m. in the chapel of the First Baptist Church of Crossett.

Rev. J. W. Buckner officiated at the double ring ceremony against a background of candelabra holding white tapers, with baskets of gladioli and stock on either side of the chancel. C. J. Holiman was vocalist and Mrs. Fenton Taylor, organist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie fashioned with fitted bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace, scoop neckline, elbow sleeves and watteau back with lace extending into a chapel train. Her veil of illusion was attached to a small crown of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley.

Matron of honor was Mrs. John A. White Jr., of Blacksburg, Va., and bridesmaids were Miss Patricia Ann Layrock of Searcy and Miss Jane Etheridge. They wore short dresses of yellow silk crepe designed with bell skirts and fitted lace jackets over sleeveless bodices. Completing their ensembles were matching pillbox hats with nose veils and white shoes and gloves. Each carried a single long stemmed white rose.

Barry L. Switzer of Fayetteville, attended his brother as best man and ushers were John A. White Jr., brother of the bride, of Blacksburg, Va., and Gregory Ball of Fort Smith.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in Fellowship hall of the church, where the bride's table covered with a hand-crocheted table cloth, was centered with an arrangement of yellow gladioli in a silver bowl flanked by yellow tapers in branched silver candelabra.

Mrs. Barry Switzer of Fayetteville had charge of the bride's book. Miss Norma Agnew of Little Rock, presided at the punch bowl and Miss Lynn Hall of Jacksonville, Ark., served the wedding cake.

After a short wedding trip to Florida the couple will be at home in Highland - Forde Apartments in Nashville, Tenn., where Mr. Switzer will enter law school at Vanderbilt University and the bride will teach in Nashville public schools.

MRS. ROBERT BROOKS WILLIAMS

Ludlow-Calhoun Wedding Is Solemnized Saturday

A candle arch, draped with Southern smilax and large fan shaped arrangements of white gladioli formed a background setting in McGuire Methodist church Saturday, August 21 for the wedding of Miss Patricia Ann Calhoun and Robert Preston Ludlow. Candles with white satin bows and ivy were used in the church windows.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Clayton H. Calhoun, 1109 Audubon Ave., West Monroe and the late Mr. Calhoun and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Ludlow, 3918 Old Sterlington Road, Monroe.

Rev. Don E. Wineinger, chaplain of Glenwood hospital, assisted by Rev. Alvin P. Smith, minister of McGuire church, performed the double ring vows at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Dave Norris was organist and Eugene Smith, soloist.

Escorted by her brother, Charles Howard Calhoun, the bride wore a gown of French Chantilly lace with Sabrina neckline, etched with pearls and sequins and long tapered sleeves. The sequin motifs extended over the bouffant skirt of scalloped lace tiers that swept to a chapel train. A crown of lace petals, outlined in pearls held her tiered veil of illusion. She carried a white Bible crested with a white orchid and garlands of feathered chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

Miss Dorothy Joyce Beckett of Memphis, Tenn., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a gown of Poland green peau de soie, designed with fitted bodice, belled skirt and cummerbund caught in a bow with streamers. Her short veil of green illusion was attached to a circlet of green peau de soie. Matron of honor, Mrs. Donald Ray Lonidier of Arcadia, cousin of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Mrs. Larry Lewis of West Monroe, were dressed identically to the maid of honor, in gowns of honey gold peau de soie. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow pompons accented with coral fans.

Also wearing gowns of honey gold peau de soie were the candlelighters, Miss Charlene Beckett, cousin of the bride and Miss Connie Carr, niece of the groom. Flower girl was Miss Donna Lynn Lonidier of Arcadia, who wore a full skirted frock of yellow taffeta and carried a basket of yellow and white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Ludlow served as best man for his son and groomsmen-ushers were Walter William Halbert, Conrad Ludlow, brother of the groom; Robert Shelby and Donald Ray Lonidier. Ring bearer was William Howard Lonidier.

The bride's mother wore a gown of royal blue with lace bodice and chiffon draped skirt, with matching peau de soie accessories and a corsage of blue tinted chrysanthemums. A beige lace sheath over peau de soie was worn by the groom's mother with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow chrysanthemums and beige velvet leaves.

For the reception which followed in the church parlor, the yellow and white color theme was carried out. Central decor for the bride's table was a bouquet of yellow Fuji chrysanthemums and babies breath in a five branched silver candelabra.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in West Monroe. For travel the bride wore a pink silk shantung suit with pink accessories and the orchid from her bouquet.

A graduate of West Monroe high school the bride is presently employed in Monroe. A graduate of Ouachita high school, Mr. Ludlow is a senior at Northeast Louisiana State College and also employed with a local railroad.

Ruston Couple Marries In Church Scene

Miss Margaret Ann Payton and Robert Brooks Williams were married in the First Baptist church of Ruston Saturday, August 21, at 6:30 p.m. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Payton, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bobbie Williams, all of Ruston.

The church was decorated with bouquets of white gladioli, stock, and pompons. At either side of steps leading to the altar were palms, flanked with white candelabra.

Mr. Payton escorted his daughter and gave her in marriage. Her ballerina length wedding gown of bowknot chantilace was styled with fitted bodice and long sleeves tapering to points over the hands. A tiara of satin roses and pearls held her veil of illusion. She carried an informal cascade of sweetheart roses and carnations.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Frank Heathman, who wore shadow lace over green taffeta with round neckline and short sleeves. The dome skirt was accented by a back bow. Her headpiece was a Dior bow of green taffeta. She carried a gladiolus with camellia foliage.

Mr. Williams served his son as best man. Ushers were Dwight Anderson, Van Max Hays, Allen Carpenter, James Payton, brother of the bride, Russell Alexander, Larry Taylor, Clayton Barns.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the college department of the church. Miss Judy Denny presided at the bride's book, which lay on a table with the bride's bouquet.

The matron of honor's bouquet was placed beside a silver candelabra on the refreshment table. Miss Carol Turner served the cake, and Miss Marilyn Madden, punch. Assisting were Misses Nancy Dowling, Catherine Colvin, and Mary Jane Byars.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will live in Ruston.

Opti-Mrs. Hear Talk On Fabrics

Opti-Mrs. of Greater Monroe held its monthly meeting at the Famous Fabric Shop in Mid-City Plaza on Monday evening, August 16.

Irving Leibowitz and Mrs. Ann May presented a program on the news in fall fashion fabrics and the way to best attire the individual figure type. They stressed that the leading colors for fall, coming from New York, the fashion center of the United States, are currant red, flag blue, bayberry green, dawn beige and fig. Much will also be seen of the heathery look for daytime and the chenille and ribbon look for evening wear.

After touring the new establishment, the following members and guests were served refreshments, Mrs. Bobby Bruce, Mrs. Sheldon Ray, Mrs. Leo Wall, Mrs. Robert Lee, Mrs. Archie Parker, Mrs. Joe Ware, Mrs. Jack Phillips, Mrs. Roy Scalia, Mrs. Earl Tarver, Mrs. Grady Merriman, Mrs. George Parsons, Mrs. Sam Hanna, Mrs. James Files, Mrs. David Kahn, Mrs. John C. Parkerson, Mrs. Joe D. Guerriero, Mrs. John W. Bowman, Mrs. Bob Anderson, Mrs. Jimmy Branch, Mrs. Ann Roberts, Mrs. Mary Jane Cordaro, Mrs. Pearl Bowman, Mrs. Ann May and Mr. Leibowitz.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Clay Blakemore, Mrs. Harry Cooper and Mrs. Allen Coon.

Pucci Prints Are Medieval

When all the showings are over, Emilio Pucci is always what remains of Italian fashion. His way with prints makes the news. This fall's Pucci prints are adapted from the medieval Palio of Sienna, the annual horse race in which competitors have carried banners of noble houses for centuries.

These boldly colored devices suit the Pucci taste for striking prints. He uses them to make pageboy tunics worn over matching print tights or stretch silk jerseys. The Marchese is still the master of stretch, too, as in his high-waisted evening dress, slit up the sides to show the tights beneath.

After all, tights are nothing new. They go right back to the Middle Ages.

Order Bars Exorcising Of 'Evil Spirits'

BERGAMO, Italy (UPI) — Father Aldo da Milano, bearded Capuchin exorcist who drove "evil spirits" out of men and women amid wild scenes of collective excitement, has gone into seclusion in a remote monastery. The people of Bergamo are still wondering whether his removal was a good or bad event.

The bald, sedate Capuchin friar who recently was the center of a nationwide controversy, bowed to orders from his superiors after a few days of disobedience and left Bergamo still contending that his mysterious powers came from God but resigned not to use them if his superiors wouldn't let him.

He left behind 29 poor children in a charity home he built six years ago, and which he said he considered his chief mission — far more important than driving out the demons.

The 44 - year old priest, born Carlo Donizelli, incurred the disfavor of his superiors after Italian newspapers gave much space to what they called scenes of "collective hysteria" during his exorcism sessions.

The driving out of evil spirits is permitted by the Catholic Church, although it is far less common now than in the Middle Ages, but Father Aldo's methods were considered irregular. Those who came to him rolled about on the ground while Father Aldo made incantations to drive the demons from their bodies. Many of them shouted, cursed and vomited while Father Aldo struggled for hours with the "demons." In the end they looked confused and stunned and said the demons had left their bodies.

Newsmen who went to the corrugated iron pavillion where Father Aldo practices his exorcism sessions reported such scenes as a woman twisting a wooden rosary around her wrists until they bled, or a father holding a shaking, hysterically laughing boy in his arms and shouting: "The devil, the devil is eating my son. In God's name, Father Aldo, help him."

Capuchin authorities in Rome stripped Father Aldo of his habit and ordered him to leave Bergamo. He bowed to the orders and was allowed to wear the habit when he left.

The "House for Boys of Our Lady of Faith," which Father Aldo started from scratch in 1959, was entrusted by Church authorities to a priest who already had been running another charity home in Bergamo.

Although the pavillion where the exorcism sessions took place was on the grounds of the children's home and the boys sometimes watched his practices, Father Aldo always insisted he had kept his two activities entirely separate.

"The children's home is my true activity, or at least the main one," Father Aldo said in an interview shortly before leaving Bergamo.

Father Aldo founded the home in a villa on the outskirts of the town, the gift of an aged woman whom Father Aldo said he cured from a mysterious disease. Funds came from a number of contributors.

Father Aldo ran the home with almost military efficiency. The 29 boys, aged six to 17, got up at quarter past six, made their own beds, cleaned their rooms and attended school at the home. Several of them got vocational training.

Rev. Myers is a native of New York state and graduated from Beloit College, Beloit, Wis., and McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill. He was ordained by the Madison, Wis., Presbytery, and has served churches in Indiana, Ohio and has had the pastorate in Mena for the past seven years.

Wall Symbol Of Church, State Strife

LONZA, Poland (AP) — A moss-covered wall has become a symbol of the struggle between Poland's Communist regime and the Roman Catholic Church.

Officials of this town 100 miles northeast of Warsaw want the wall, enclosing church property, torn down for a street-widening and traffic improvement project.

In mid-June, priests placed a Madonna and child on a pedestal just inside the wall, right at the blind street corner the city wants to round off. Thus the corner became a holy place.

Jerzy Newelski, vice president of the government's District Council, told newsmen: "We regret that the church put that figure there. We don't want a fight. This should be settled in humanitarian fashion. But the bishop's secretary, a backward priest, is playing on the feelings of the people. They have made it now so people will say 'Look how the Communists are oppressing the church'."

Mayor Ignacy Kosinski said the wall will be pulled down if no agreement is reached by Nov. 1.

The officials said they have good relations with the bishop of the Lonza diocese, but that decisions are made by his secretary, the Rev. Jozef Biernacki. They said Father Biernacki refuses to accept the legal price of 65,000 zlotys—$2,700—for the property.

Father Biernacki will say nothing, but priests at the Lonza Curia treat the wall question as a test of strength and describe it as a small example of the state pressure they feel is on all sides.

A delegation of peasants recently asked for support in their refusal to pay a state fine of $50 for erecting, without permission, across in a field at the site of a supposed miracle.

Defense Of People

"We do not recognize this miracle, but we have to defend our people," a priest said.

Priests said if the Church accepts compensation for its property at the Lonza wall, permission may be withheld for a new wall after the street is widened. They would agree, they said, if the city would just move the Madonna and rebuild the wall. City officials said this would not be legal.

Priests denied the charge of town officials that they are blacklisting townspeople who agree to removal of the wall.

Underlying the wall quarrel is a long struggle over religious teaching of Polish children, a source of bitterness on both sides.

Churches Here Show Gains In Membership; Some Lose

By DIANE TAYLOR
World Staff Writer

Is spiritual growth in the Twin Cities from a church membership standpoint keeping pace with population gains?

A check with Monroe-West Monroe area churches showed most churches have increased their memberships during the past five years, a fact due largely to the growing population of this area.

Most churches today are located in the rapidly-growing residential areas. These are the churches whose memberships are on an upward climb.

Some Decreases

For the most part, the downtown churches showed decreases in their enrollments and the reasons cited varied from lack of interest on the part of members to location of the churches.

Spokesman for the First Methodist Church of Monroe, pastored by the Rev. George W. Harbuck, said 1,489 were on the membership rolls in 1960 and only 1,385 belong to the church now. The reason, the spokesman said, is that "we're one of those dying downtown churches."

The First Methodist's situation, Rev. Harbuck said, is that it is one of the oldest churches in Monroe, and its founding fathers are dying. The population increase does not help because those persons moving into town move into the suburbs and join the new churches near their homes. "People don't want to drive downtown to church anymore," he said.

Laymen at First Methodist have noted that in the past ten years or so, the population here has been a roving one. When the school year is over, many leave town from the college. Others are merely transferred. It seems the downtown churches — especially the "First" churches attract more transients than do suburban churches. The turnover is greater and most of them show signs of a decreasing membership.

Such is the situation with First Baptist Church of Monroe, according to its pastor, Dr. James T. Horton. "We usually have a large turnover downtown. Being a large church," he said, "we have had some increase but it is not too great. We must work hard for what enrollment increase we gain."

Church records showed 733 new members have been added to the church rolls since 1960, but this is not an accurate picture of the present membership because, Dr. Horton said, it does not account for the members who have moved away or joined other churches or who have died.

"In one recent year alone, we buried over 50 members of our church," the pastor said, "and this is a big blow to any organization."

Another church membership which has decreased due to its location is that of the Central Assembly of God at 501 Calypso. The church's pastor, the Rev. William R. Blair, said "We are hampered attendance-wise and membership-wise, because of the construction of Interstate-20 which has made it difficult for potential members to get to us. Our parking space, too, does not provide for many, with things being as torn up as they have been recently."

Rev. Blair said Central Assembly of God has had a relatively large turnover, but not really a great increase in church members. "We have about 200 to 225 attending during an average Sunday morning worship service," he said. The present summer slump, however, has cut that figure.

Sts. Constantine and Helene Greek Orthodox Church, situated at 2005 Forsythe Ave., has kept pretty much the same enrollment over the past five years, according to the pastor, the Rev. D. N. Sakellariees.

Father Sakellariees said the church has about 30 families now, and had about the same number back in 1960. He said the rolls stayed the same because the usual number of deaths and new babies sort of evened things out.

First Assembly of God Church of West Monroe, pastored by Rev. F. D. Wall, at 715 Cypress St., has shown an average increase per Sunday of 50 to 75 persons over attendance and church membership some five years ago.

Said Rev. Wall: "Five years ago, we had only 250 in our Sunday schools and now there are 350 enrolled." All-in-all, he said, this gain in attendance is attributed to the church's stimulated program and the fact that more people are coming into the Monroe-West Monroe area.

Rev. Carl R. Owens, pastor of First Church of God of Monroe, 1513 S. 3rd St., said that his church has increased its membership by an average of 10 per cent each year over the past five or six years. "Even our summertime attendance has increased considerably this year," he said, "to about 25 per cent over previous summers."

"Our people just seem to be more dedicated right now and are individually bringing new members to our church. Of course we are a young church — only 8½ years old, and we are still growing. One thing which has helped our membership was a missionary convention back in early May of this year. The missionary who spoke then brought in many who surrendered their lives to Christ."

Membership Up

Sopkesmen at College Place Baptist Church said the membership today is up 561 over the membership of 1960.

Parkveiw Baptist on Forsythe Avenue, shows a membership today which exceeds 1,000. Back in 1960, the church's rolls showed 785 members. Parkview is located in a fastly-growing area of town, which may be the basic reason for its fast increase in membership.

Some 280 persons have joined Jackson Street Church of Christ since 1960. The minister, E. C. McKenzie, says "Our membership increase is not due so much to the population explosion as to the zeal of our members in talking to others of our church. Our faithful church members themselves can be credited with our increase in membership and in Sunday school enrollment."

Assistant pastor at Jesus the Good Shepherd Catholic Church, Rev. Edward J. Moore, said there are some 4,000 to 5,000 Catholics in the city of Monroe and that the Catholic Church probably grows more proportionately with population increase than other denominations because a greater increase of these persons moving into the area are Catholics.

Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. C. Marsh, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic Church at 121 Jackson St., said Catholicism has grown in this area largely because of the population increase, but also due to a large number of conversions and the usual increase in membership brought about through childbirth.

O. C. Roddey, an elder of First Presbyterian Church of Monroe on Stubbs Avenue, said the fact that his church has been without a minister for the past five or six months has greatly effected its membership. The decrease, he said, has been saddening, but loyal church members hope that the future will brighten with the arrival Sept. 1 of the church's new minister, Rev. Preston G. Brown who will come here from Belcher.

Roddey said although the church hasn't had an increase in attendance, it has had a good, steady attendance over the past year. "We haven't had a normal church enrollment in years," he said.

St. Paul's Methodist Church has an enrollment which stands right at 1,000 persons now, reports the church's new minister, Rev. Fred Flurry. He said that in May, 1960, the church membership totaled 688 and the May, 1964, figure read 900.

"The church is growing because it is in a popular subdivision and because its past minister helped launch a full program of activities for all age groups," he said. The church has a history of full activities in every phase of church life."

The facts and figures found during the survey seemed to prove, for this area at least, that memberships in the downtown churches are decreasing while the trend for churches in the residential areas shows a marked increase in both attendance and membership.

Sunday Sermon

Apostle Paul Tells About Perfect Life

The Threefold Secret Of Life

By DR. CLIFTON TENNISON
Pastor, First Baptist Church
West Monroe

In Philippians 3:12 the Scripture reads, ". . .I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." The great Apostle Paul gives his answer to the question, how to attain a perfect life, out of his personal experience. Paul admits that he has not already attained perfection but that he is striving toward a Christ - recommended life. He commends to us a threefold secret for a happy, good life.

The first of the secrets for a happy life, Paul tells us, is the fulfilling of life's purpose. Listen to the Scripture again, "I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ." Paul is looking back at that memorial moment when he was apprehended by Christ Jesus. He recalls and emphasizes for the reader that he was arrested for a purpose. The great Apostle states it very simply and concisely when he says that the purpose for himself and every genuine Christian is conformity to Christ. (Romans 8:28-29) Every doctrine of holiness must fulfill this purpose to be Christian and Biblical.

The second of the secrets for a happy and full life presented by Paul in this Scripture is the forsaking of life's pre-occupations. This is found in Philippians 3:13 which reads, "I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind. . ." The Scripture here employs a metaphor as reference is made to a race track. Paul speaks of leaving behind the previous stages of the race. He will not and must not waste time surveying his progress. Only one thing is important — and that is to run so as to win. One of the most subtle devices that our enemy has for slowing us up in our Christian life is that of engaging our minds and hearts with the pre-occupation of past failures or successes. If we are going to live lives of holiness and victory, we must forget all that is past by forsaking it or leaving it behind.

The third secret can be summed up in the phrase "the foreseeing of life's promotions." This is found in the third chapter of Philippians, the 13th and 14th verses. ". . .reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The picture is still that of the runner whose eyes are on the finishing tape. Without a doubt, the prize is the reward at the judgment seat of Christ. What greater promotion in life can any believer foresee than that of being crowned at the judgment seat of Christ? This was certainly Paul's ambition as evident in II Timothy 4:7-8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Now—these three secrets of life may be your possession if you are willing to yield your life to Christ Jesus as Lord and Master. The poet simply wrote it like this:

"Life with its way before us lies,
Christ is the path, and Christ the prize."

District Meet Of Nazarenes Is Scheduled

The pastor and members of the Church of Nazarene in this area will take part in the annual Louisiana district assembly to be held at the Nazarene district center at Pineville on Wednesday and Thursday, August 25 - 26.

Annual reports will be made by pastors of all 54 churches on the district. These churches now have a total of about 2,600 members and a combined Sunday school enrollment of 4,500 persons.

The Rev. T. T. McCord, Pineville, will give his annual message as district superintendent and will outline plans for the year. District officers will be elected.

The presiding general superintendent will be Dr. Samuel Young of Kansas City, Mo., who has served continuously since 1948 in this highest elective office of the denomination.

The Church of the Nazarene is the largest Protestant denomination that stands for scriptural holiness in the Wesleyan tradition. It now has a world membership of 415,000 in more than 5,000 churches.

It maintains about 600 missionaries in 46 countries.

The denomination's radio program is "Shower of Blessing."

Pulpit Guest

Clarence Powell, director of cottage life at the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe, will be pulpit guest at 7 p.m. today at the Edgewood Baptist Church in West Monroe. The pastor, Rev. Don Wainwright, will be preaching at Start Baptist Church.

Ecumenical Parleys Often Embarrassing

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Although fraternity is the rising fashion today among the different churches, there also are occasional slips in carrying out the new friendlier style of behavior.

At times, getting together involves stepping on one another's toes.

"I guess it simply shows that ecumenical relations, like true love, don't always run smoothly," observed the Rev. Dr. Carl E. Keightley, editor of the Texas Methodist, after one such episode in Dallas.

Some religious bodies for so long have kept a cool distance apart, particularly Protestantism and Roman Catholicism, that the changed approaches today sometimes skid into unexpected briars.

Ordinarily in these cases, the upsets and embarrassments are accidental, a matter of unintentional fumbles in an unfamiliar environment. Nevertheless, it can be painful.

An extra bit of tact eased the strain at San Francisco's recent religion and peace conference, involving representatives of most all the world's religions, Eastern and Western.

At one session, a woman urged a resolution declaring that the only true peace is the "peace of Christ." There was a moment's hush at the mixed assemblage. Uneasy glances shifted to the Jewish rabbi who was presiding.

"Don't you think," he suggested mildly, "it might prove controversial to some of the delegates? For instance, the Buddhists might object to such a statement." The deft touch dissolved the tension.

The situation in Texas arose several weeks ago when Roman Catholics were hosts to an interdenominational session, at which some of the Methodists reported that alcoholic beverages were available.

Hearing of this, Dr. Keightley protested editorially that it offended Methodists, whose church discipline repudiates liquor, and that Catholics had been discourteous in bringing Methodists into such circumstances.

The editor of the Texas Catholic, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. James I. Tucek, jibed back that he couldn't be bothered with a "blue nose" who demands acceptance of his standards "as a first premise to friendship."

Courtesy, he wrote, "behooves one and all to show a bit of politeness when they have accepted an invitation to the house of another man."

Dr. Keightley suggested he'd rather be a blue nose than a red nose. This time, the fuss had broken into the Dallas newspapers.

Dr. Keightley told me later that his concern was that liquor is a major social problem and that the churches should discuss it together but "everybody sweeps it under the rug."

However, there was a disconcerting upshot to the whole thing:

Liquor had not been served at the interdenominational meeting, after all. Some Methodists present had mistakenly thought it was, and Dr. Keightley and Msgr. Tucek had accepted their assumption.

"That's what embarrassed me," Dr. Keightley said, conceding a red face. There was no more discussion of noses. He added of Msgr. Tucek:

"We were good friends. We still are good friends. Certainly there was no serious collision, just a frank exchange. I plan to call him soon for a visit. There are a lot of things about the Catholic Church that we could well emulate. There also are some of our ways which they might consider."

So goes the getting-acquainted process.

The "rebaptism" of the President's daughter, Luci Johnson, in the Roman Catholic Church — despite that church's recognition of baptism in other denominations — was another recent toe-stubbing, and brought Catholic regrets.

"We are still in the infancy of an ecumenical age," observed a Catholic paper, the St. Louis Review.

Another rhubarb ensued lately after appearance of an advertisement placed by the Laymen's League of the Unitarian Universalist Churches, which stress tolerance toward other faiths.

The ad, one in a series in magazines and newspapers, said in part:

"Are you a Unitarian Universalist without knowing it? . . . Do you believe that no one has the right to do your thinking for you? . . . That practicing brotherhood is more important than parroting creeds?"

To the weekly, Christian Century, this seemed to imply a slur at other churches, and to misrepresent them. "No one evidently has told the Laymen's League adman about ecumenism," the Century said.

Replying, the Unitarian-Universalist periodical, the Register-Leader, said the ads were addressed primarily to those without religion. Furthermore, the reply noted that Unitarian-Universalist churches are excluded (because they do not affirm belief in Christ's divinity) for the major ecumenical bodies, the National and World Councils of Churches.

The hassle touched off a wave of letter writing. One Unitarian wrote:

"If we advertise in a 'pre-ecumenical' spirit, it is because we are still very conscious of being 'outcast'."

More Private Schools Forming

BATON ROUGE (AP)— New public school desegregation may run the total of private, nonsectarian schools up to 75, but there should be enough money to continue the full $2-a-day state grants, officials said Saturday.

Meanwhile, a federal court has under study a suit seeking to knock out the state grants system for private school pupils who seek to escape public school integration.

The state filed exceptions to the suit. There is no indication when the court will announce its decision on this part of the case. The suit has not been tried.

At the end of the last school term, Louisiana had 68 private schools whose pupils were qualified to receive state grants. Fifty-eight were in Orleans and Jefferson parishes, three in Baton Rouge, seven in Shreveport.

James Fountain, director of the Louisiana Financial Assistance Commission (LFAC), said six new private schools are being formed, and possibly a seventh.

He said new schools are in the making at Opelousas, Clinton, St. Francisville, Bogalusa, Bossier City and Covington. And he said there is some talk of a new grant-in-aid school at Monroe.

Fountain said he had no idea how much an enrollment increase would come from the new schools, but he would guess 1,000 to 1,500.

"I think we will have funds to continue grants as they have been at $2 a day," he said.

The state, at latest count, paid out 11,500 grants to private school pupils. Last year the cost came to $3,662,000 and the LFAC was allowed by the legislature to carry over a surplus of some $500,000.

Fountain said for the coming year the commission expects to have available about $4,100,000.

Under the Louisiana grants-in-aid law, $300,000 is held aside from revenues of the state's two-cent sales tax for administration by the LFAC.

The full impact of the boost in private schools and number of grants will not be felt until September, when classes are formed.

The commission at a recent meeting decided that if the state has a large influx of private school students and insufficient money, the only alternative will be to reduce the amount of individual grants.

LFAC Chairman E. W. Gravolet Jr. emphasized that the cut will be made only if there is not enough money to go around otherwise. Gravolet is state senator from Pointe-a-la-hache.

Crossett School Board Seeks To Solve Problem

CROSSETT, Ark. (Special) — The Crossett School Board has voted to turn over a knotty districting problem to the Ashley County Board of Education.

Solution of the problem will affect some 60 students who have been attending Crossett schools even though their property taxes are paid to the Hamburg School District.

The problem arose when it was discovered that the students in question actually live in the Hamburg district, but are attending classes in Crossett.

An attempt to settle the matter between the Crossett and Hamburg boards has apparently failed. Crossett Supt. Hugh Willis reported after a meeting with Hamburg Supt. S. P. Portis, "He told us they don't want us to annex the land the students are living on. They reported they will be glad to take back the students, or they would give them to us, but they don't want any of their land annexed to our district."

A Crossett School Board member, Hamp Etheridge Jr., has checked with the County Assessor, and the tax value of the land in question brings in about $2,026.63 annually. This is money Hamburg is now getting, though Crossett is paying for the education of the children who live there.

Willis said two different groups, one Negro and one white, had presented petitions to him asking that the students be allowed to remain in the Crossett schools. The children had attended the Crossett schools for years before the error was discovered.

William P. Norman, president of the Crossett School Board, said he will write the county board secretary to ask for a special meeting to try to solve the problem.

Plane, 4 Victims Found In Swamp

PEARLINGTON, Miss. (AP) —A wrecked Arizona plane and the bodies of its four passengers were found Saturday in an isolated swamp section.

The bodies were airlifted out by Coast Guard helicopter.

The single-engine Cessna 182 had been missing for two days. It took off from Fairhope, Ala., Thursday, piloted by P. V. Brothers, 31. He was accompanied by David H. Gooch, 31, Mrs. Gooch, and their 6-year-old daughter, Sherrie. All lived in Tucson, Ariz.

The wreckage was spotted by planes from the Mississippi Civil Air Patrol, which joined in an air search that stretched along the Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas coast.

The plane hit on its nose and buried itself past the cabin in the mud. The scene was in the outer zone of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Mississippi Test Facility.

Russia Softens Tone On Viet Nam Affairs

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Moscow speaks guardedly these days about the Viet Nam war.

There are signs the Kremlin thinks the U.S. commitment there has dented Communist hopes for a military victory.

Now, in what appears to be its maximum effort at compromise with the Red Chinese, the Kremlin is seeking to persuade Communists to unite and to seek less risky paths to the Communist goal of world domination.

The Kremlin indicates in recent statements that it senses danger that the crisis in Viet Nam will ignite an Asian or a world explosion.

Thus, reverting to the tactics it used in another time of danger, just before World War II, it calls for pursuit of what it terms "the only true line."

The line: Reliance on Soviet strength and Soviet protection in world communism's quest for power; in non-Communist countries, espousal of the "popular front," a tactic developed in 1935 by the Communist International.

This has been spelled out in Pravda, the Communist party paper, and the theoretical journal Kommunist. Moscow leaders seem trying to execute an end run around Red China — to re-establish Soviet influence in Southeast Asia, and possibly to break a log jam obstructing negotiations in the Viet Nam crisis.

These leaders may be seeking insurance lest they be involved against their will in events beyond their control.

Their aims, as outlined in Kommunist, line up this way: (1) developing the U.S.S.R.'s own "Socialist gains;" (2) strengthening world communism and working for its unity; (3) assuring "external conditions for building socialism and communism;" (4) creating a "favorable international situation" for communism; (5) preventing world war.

Kommunist argues that an economically and militarily strong U.S.S.R. can create "favorable conditions" by forcing concessions from the West on such things as dismantling bases and withdrawing troops to their own frontiers. This, the article indicates, is the real aim of the "peaceful coexistence policy."

Kommunist finds Soviet leaders "fully aware of their responsibility" in a struggle between communism and the West, but indicates armed struggle is not necessarily the way. It upholds "the Leninist thesis that the Soviet republic exerts its principal revolution by its economic policy."

This seems to argue that there are more ways than one to skin a cat. Kommunist says France and the United States are at odds, France and West Gemany are quarreling and that there is a trend to the far left among new nations. Thus, it seems to say, this is no time to take long risks.

Nor is it the time, Kommunist argues, to seek a showdown on "temporary differences" in the Red camp. Rather it is time to close ranks and permit Soviet might and diplomacy to clear the way for "the triumph of communism in the world in conditions of peace."

The implication may be that the war in Southeast Asia is not paying off.

The popular front line championed by Italy's Communists and others envisions a "single party of the left," in which Communists temporarily would not seek to dominate the other elements.

To doctrinaire Red Chinese and their allies, this is treason, the worst kind of "modern revisionism."

Davis Tabernacle

QUITMAN (Special) — Approximately 100 persons, including former Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, attended a special singing at the new Jimmie H. Davis Tabernacle near Quitman Saturday night.

The program concluded a two-week singing school which was conducted by The Lester Family, spiritual singers of St. Louis, Mo. A number of singers from the St. Louis area joined the singers Saturday night.

Included in the program were a number of favorite songs led by the former governor and echoed by the entire audience.

Gunman Injures Store Operator In West Monroe

A black - masked gunman pistol whipped and threatened to kill a 56 - year - old West Monroe food store operator as he left his store shortly before 9 p.m. Saturday in an abortive attempt at robbery.

"He kept telling me he was going to kill me," said Frank Pettit, operator of the E&P Food Store at North Ninth and Natchitoches Road, "but I didn't do what he told me to."

Pettit said he had just locked his store and was going to his car when a man in overalls with a black mask over the lower portion of his face rose up on the other side of the vehicle's hood. Pettit refused the man's demand for money he related, and the would - be robber advanced on him.

"I kept backing up and he stuck the gun in my stomach. I grabbed for it with both hands and it fell on the ground. We scuffled and he picked up the gun and hit me on the back of the head," Pettit said and touched the blood stained hospital dressing over the wound. The man then fled.

The victim described his attacker as white, about six feet tall, weighing about 200 pounds and about 45 or 50 years old.

Pettit said he only had 65 cents on him at the time of the robbery. He, along with his bookkeeper identified as Charles Kendall, had made his weekend bank deposit earlier Saturday night. Police said Kendall was a witness to the robbery attempt.

Pettit said the man talked in a low tone and his voice was on the coarse side. When asked if he could identify the robber from police file pictures, he replied that he could, saying "I got a good look at him. It didn't happen quick."

Job Corpsmen Tell Of Camp's 'Racket'

MORGANFIELD, Ky. (AP) — Six angry young job corpsmen told Saturday of riot, "protection," and fear at Camp Breckinridge.

Theirs is the story of a Job Corps experiment soured by a series of coincidences that resulted in a riot Friday.

As the six crossed a dusty field toward a Red Cross hut where they would ask for a transfer of another Job Corps center, one said: "I ain't going to stay here and get my throat cut."

Another added in reference to the "protection racket" that they and Job Corps officials said existed at the camp: "After I got off the bus (on his return from a weekend trip) they asked me if I had any 'life insurance' and I said, 'Hell, no.'"

Another student told of watching a beating in the mess hall Wednesday: "They just took his head, pushed it in a plate of food, then stomped his face in."

One boy said he told a camp official Thursday night there was trouble brewing at the camp. "They didn't do nothin'," the boy said.

Only a smattering of the camp's 630 students remained on the campus during the weekend. Many were in the nearby towns of Evansville, Ind., and Henderson waiting to see what happens at the center.

The boys are staying in motels and hotels. The six boys said their stay at a Henderson hotel Friday night was paid by the federal government.

Earlier Saturday seven youths were arraigned. Charges of public drunkenness on government property were dismissed in U.S. District Court at Owensboro. They were were sent home and told they had been dismissed from the Job Corps, but could reapply from their home towns.

U.N. To Witness New Peace Move In Viet Conflict

LONDON (UPI) — Concerted Viet Nam peace moves will be set in motion through the United Nations and neutral countries when the General Assembly reconvenes in New York next month, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

Until then peace efforts will be "shelved," they said.

The presence at the U.N. Assembly of leaders from Western, Communist and unaligned nations was expected to provide the framework for a concerted major peace initiative in Southeast Asia. Indications are it will overwhelming support from the bulk of the U.N. membership.

The timing is intended to coincide with the end of the monsoon season, which has favored the Communist Viet Con guerrillas.

Peace soundings were expected to be set in motion through a variety of U.N. channels—the secretary general, a selected group of unaligned nations and through diplomatic moves.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who has been very active in the past trying to promote Viet Nam peace talks, plans to push a firm personal initiative at the assembly.

Some Commonwealth leaders also were expected to put out peace feelers.

Diplomats said that concerted pressure for peace negotiations may help to impress Hanoi that by refusing to talk it will alienate world public opinion.

Vote Examiners Register 357 In Ouachita Parish

Federal voting examiners who began registering Ouachita Parish Negro voters Friday in Monroe registered 197 Saturday for a cumulative total of 357, the U. S. Civil Service Commission announced.

Some 22,702 persons have been registered to vote since the new voting rights bill became effective in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

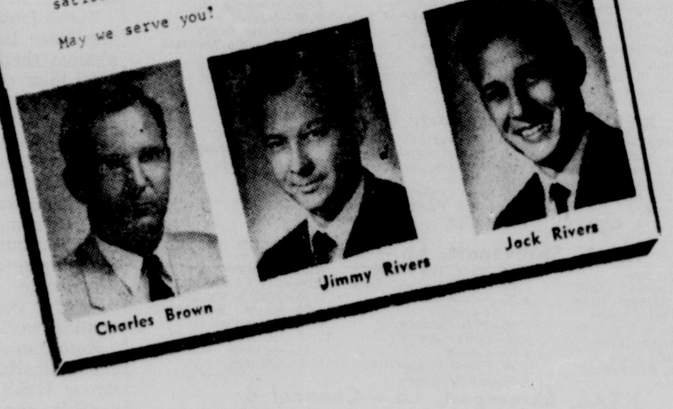
AN OPEN LETTER TO USED CAR BUYERS

In the 25 years of this dealership, more than 30,000 people have purchased used cars from us. Many, of course, are repeat customers, which to us is a frank testimonial of service and satisfaction.

This record has been made possible by the careful selection of used cars we offer for sale to you the retail purchasers. Wrecks, cars that have been abused through lack of care, or extensive mileage, are sold at wholesale and not reconditioned.

We use our used car department to build friends who we know will eventually purchase a new Ford. As have thousands of others, you too will receive service and satisfaction at Rivers Ford.

May we serve you?



Charles Brown — Jimmy Rivers — Jack Rivers

It is another shopping center development of Commercial Properties Development Corportation.

Mid-City Plaza City's Fabulous Showplace

A fabulous showcase of up-to-the-minute merchandise is contained in Monroe's newest shopping complex — the Mid-City Plaza.

This modern mecca for shoppers of the Northeast Louisiana area is distinguished by four stores, each featuring top quality lines, located in one large building of notable exterior physical beauty.

More than two years of planning and building have been culminated with the completion of the Mid - City Plaza.

Set on a seven - and - one-half acre tract facing Louisville Avenue at No. 18th St., the plaza includes a ground floor area totaling 89,378 square feet and parking space for more than 600 vehicles.

Largest tenant in the shopping center is J. C. Penney Company department store, which encompasses the latest developments in department store design, construction, fixturing and equipment. In addition to the main Penney building a separate auto service and supply building faces Louisville at 18th.

Other stores in the center are The F. W. Woolworth store, America's largest variety store chain; Famous Fabrics, operated by Irving Leibowitz, and the Fashion Shop, owned by Sherck Bogen. Both Leibowitz and Bogen are long - time merchants and residents of Monroe.

Woolworth's will feature full lines of top quality variety store merchandise. Mass displays and quick check - out service are added attractions of the spacious display areas and easily accessible items.

The Fashion, ladies' ready to wear store, opened on Monday, Aug. 16. It features all types of wearing apparel for juniors and women — formal, informal, casual wear and bridal fashions.

Mrs. Florence McCormick will manage the new Fashion at Mid - City Plaza, while the downtown store will be continued under the management of Mrs. Mayme Hodges.

The Fabric Shop, which opened Aug. 2, is managed by Mrs. Pearl Bower. Mrs. Iola Jones will manage the downtown location on DeSiard. The shop, comprising 3800 square feet, will carry all types of apparel fabrics and a complete tailoring department.

The selection of Monroe as the site for the Mid - City Plaza shopping complex is due to the recognition of this city as the key hub of the Northeast Louisiana trade areas with tremendous business potential.

Mid - City Plaza is another shopping center development of Commercial Properties Development Corporation which headquarters in the Bon Marche Regional Shopping Center of Baton Rouge.

The president of CPDC is Wilbur Marvin, a member of the Board of Trustees of the International Council of Shopping Centers.

He attended North Texas State University at Denton, Tex., and was a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at McKinney.

Women Drivers To Be Target Of Penney Service

Remember the old quip about women drivers?

When a woman puts her hand out of a car window you can only be sure of one thing — the window is open.

All that has changed. Women drivers, long recognized by insurance companies and other statistics as safer drivers than men, are taking over the care and maintenance of the family automobile to such an extent that J. C. Penney Company is now making a direct appeal to female motorists.

Hardware, Paint Are Store Feature

Penney's new paint and hardware department on the main floor of the new Mid-City Plaza store will provide professional and amateur alike with a one-stop workshop center.

One of the first paint and hardware centers in its 1,700 store chain, Penney's new department will feature a complete line of power tools, paint and sundries, bench tools, lighting fixtures and a Home Improvement Center for the "Do-It-Yourself" fan.

Penney's new line of "Penncraft" paint and hardware reflects the same high standard of quality and exhaustive testing that is found in all of the Company's private-brand soft lines.

Power Tools

The Penney lines of power tools will include drills, circular saws, sabre saws, orbital and belt sanders, routers, and grinders. The department's paint and sundries section, featuring Penney's private-brand Penncraft paints, will provide a paint for every job inside and outside the home. The new department also will carry a full line of paint tools and such sundries as thinners, varnishers, aluminum coatings, undercoatings, patchings, plasters and such paint tools as brushes, rollers, pans, scrapers and corking guns. A complete line of aluminum extension, step and kitchen ladders also will be available.

Auto Center First In Area For Store

J. C. Penney Company will open one of its first auto centers in this part of the country on Aug. 25, at Mid-City Plaza adjacent to Penny's department store.

The new auto center will have space for eight car bays and will provide a staff of 15, including a manager, service supervisor, service specialists and service maintenance men.

The new auto center will feature the company's new line of Foremost tires, batteries and auto accessories.

Motorists will enter the building from a parking lot to the rear of the auto center.

Spacious Area

A total of 7,000 square feet will comprise the center, one-fifth of which will be used for the sale of the chain's new line of private brand tires, batteries and accessories.

In keeping with the Company's policy of providing customers complete, one-stop shopping, the auto center will offer full, front-to-rear overhaul and repair work including service on brakes, mufflers, wheel alignment, shock absorbers, front-end work, tailpipe installation, lubrication, oil changes, exhaust systems, tires and batteries and the sale of auto accessories featuring everything from seat covers to convertible tops and car air conditioning.

Store manager Harlan Johnson described the Penney Company's entry into the automotive merchandising field as "further recognition of the changing buying habits of the American consumer."

He noted that recent studies have shown the consumer to be more mobile than in the past, less tied to the kind of outlets once considered traditional for certain types of merchandise and more insistent on a complete variety of goods where he shops.

One-Time Stop

The Penney manager pointed out that consumers now want integrated services, expecting to have as many of their buying needs satisfied at one time as possible. This has been a basic part of the thinking that has gone into creating Penney's auto center he said, any way it will be near the Penney store.

Johnson cited Penney's new line of Foremost batteries as an example of completeness for a single product. Parelleling the new line of Foremost tires are four basic lines of batteries, each offered with the aim of accommodating a particular kind of driving need.

Foremost batteries undergo a minimum of 80 tests and inspections during various stages of construction. Two important features of the new batteries are silver cobalt plate construction and the exclusively designed hard rubber container. Silver cobalt was developed as a new way of protecting batteries from overcharging and undercharging, the main cause of battery failure.

Penney's private-brand of lubricants, the manager added, are manufactured to the Company's rigid specifications and meet requirements of all car manufacturers as well as of the American Petroleum Institute. Penney is the first mass merchandiser to introduce its own brand of 6,000 mile moter oil.

Johnson emphasized the completeness of Penney's auto center and added that Foremost tires, batteries and auto accessories will be available at Penney's traditionally low prices for which the Company has long been noted.

NEW MANAGERS for Woolworth at Mid-City Plaza are John F. Nelson (left) store manager; Paul Wasson (center) and H. A. Keel (right), assistant managers. Nelson comes to the new Woolworth store from a position as manager at Tulsa, Okla. He has been with the Woolworth company for 11 years. Both Keel and Wasson were associated with Woolworth at Baton Rouge before coming to Monroe.

Opening Set Wednesday For New Woolworth Store

A new and ultra-modern Woolworth store located in the Mid-City Plaza will open its doors to the Monroe area public at 9 a.m., Wednesday, Aug. 25.

Public ribbon cutting ceremonies at the main entrance will mark the completion of the Woolworth-Plaza and the beginning of six days of sales in all departments.

A new concept in variety stores for the state of Louisiana, the Woolworth store is located on the west end of the Mid-City Plaza on Louisville Ave. at No. 18th St.

"We've done everything for the convenience of customers that we can think of," said John F. Nelson, store manager. "We've allowed ample space to examine merchandise, wide aisles for browsing, and lots of display area."

Open From 9-9

The new Woolworth store will be open from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. every day, except Sunday.

A large parking lot marked to accommodate 650 vehicles will insure ample space at all hours.

Largest Woolworth in this part of the country, Nelson said, the store has 20,000 square feet of selling space and all merchandise is on the same floor with no stairs to climb.

A second story provides extended room for storage so no boxes or cases will interfere with the customers in the merchandising area.

There is none of the old "dime store" atmosphere at Woolworth Plaza. New all-metal fixtures, the first of their kind in Louisiana, have grain wood paneling and are low to allow better ease of selection.

A 43-seat luncheon bar, with seats brightly decorated in persimmon and turquoise, provides both booths and counter service. Quick short orders, hot lunches, and regular meals served until 9 p.m. may be enjoyed in cool comfort.

WOOLWORTH LUNCHEONETTE at Mid-City Plaza will accommodate 43 persons. The seats are bright persimmon and turquoise, providing both booth and counter service. Features of the luncheon bar are quick short orders, hot lunches, and regular meals served in comfort up until closing time at 9 p.m. The popularity of Woolworth lunch counters is evidenced by the more than 750,000 who eat in them daily. Woolworth's restaurant volume is reported to be exceeded only by that of the Armed Forces.

WOOLWORTH'S Drug and Cosmetic department in the new store in the Mid-City Plaza Shopping Center on Louisville Avenue features all national brands.

THE NEW AND upgraded piece goods and sewing center in the new Woolworth store in the Mid-City Plaza Shopping Center will be ideal for the housewife. A wide variety in all nationally-known brands will be featured.

New Woolworth Store Opens Here

The F. W. Woolworth Company, whose newest store will open at Mid-City Plaza Wednesday, is today the world's largest variety store chain. It extends over three continents and into eight countries.

Acceptance by people of Woolworth stores and merchandise in the last 86 years can be seen in its continued growth.

It now operates 3,657 stores in all 50 states, Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Germany, the United Kingdom, Erie, Southern Rhodesia and the West Indies. At the present time, it is opening a new store every other working day.

Good Service

Despite this growth, Woolworth still regards good customer service as one of its important assets. It stresses responsibility to the customers and community in offering the best service possible.

The beginning was on June 21, 1879, when Frank Winfield Woolworth, after serving his apprenticeship as a clerk in Watertown, N. Y., stores, opened the "Great 5 Cent Store" in Lancaster, Pa.

With only $410 worth of items, none priced above a nickel, a store measuring only 14 feet by 35 feet and seven clerks, he opened his doors for business and they have not been closed since.

To accommodate the hungry shopper, approximately 1,800 of the Woolworth stores now have luncheonettes or cafeterias. The popularity of these is shown by the more than 750,000 who use them daily. Woolworth's restaurant volume is reported to be exceeded only by that of the Armed Forces.

New Jobs

The company's continued growth has added new jobs and new money to the economy. The Woolworth chain now employs approximately 85,000 men and women. In 1965 it purchased more than $500 million worth of merchandise and food in the United States alone.

Woolworth company feels that education plays a key role in the nation's and company's future. At the present time, 50 young men and women are receiving four - year scholarships in colleges of their choice, in addition 35 colleges and universities are receiving supplemental grants.

Even though the company is large and still growing, it is the attitude of Woolworth officials that each new store opening is just as important as the opening of the very first store.

Scuffing Remedy

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's common knowledge that children find it almost impossible to wear new shoes without scuffing them and getting them dirty.

To test its products, a shoe polish firm asked 100 children to wear certain shoes, scuff them and get them as dirty as possible. The kids were extra careful not to.

Departments Are Many In Woolworth's

New departments have been added to the Woolworth store in Mid-City Plaza — in addition to the many already commonplace to Woolworth customers.

Complete pet and hobby shops are two of the spotlight features at the new store.

Tropical fish, hamsters, iguanas, chameleons, guppies, goldfish and tiny turtles, with all necessary equipment to raise them properly, can be found in the pet shop, as well as parakeets, finches, canaries and other birds.

Hobby kits provide the collector with all items needed for stamps, model planes, coins and fancy work.

Music

The Woolworth-Plaza music department includes a complete record department, television sets up to $99.95, tape recorders, and transistor radios.

In the knitting department a large supply of mohair, wools, and other yarns are shown in a variety of colors.

The book nook includes gift cards of all kinds, both humorous and sentimental, and hundreds of paperbacks, displayed where they will attract the potential reader.

Cosmetics of major firms are displayed, with space mirrors provided so that customers may select shades and tectures which become them most.

John F. Nelson Manager For Woolworth Store

John F. Nelson has been named as manager for the new Woolworth store in Mid-City Plaza.

Nelson is typical of the carefully selected and trained Woolworth executives, each of whom has come up through the ranks.

He comes to the Monroe store from the managership of Woolworth's in Tulsa, Okla. He has also been manager of the store at Carbondale, Ill. and has been associated with F. W. Woolworth Company for eleven years.

Activities

A native of Harrisburg, Ill., Nelson is a member of Kiwanis, Chamber of Commerce and Baptist Church.

He and his wife, Jo Ann, and their two sons, John Calvin, 10, and Bruce Allen, 7, are now residing at 220 Ann St.

Assistant managers of the Woolworth - Plaza store are Horace Keel and Paul Wasson. Both were associated with Woolworth stores at Baton Rouge before being assigned to the new Monroe location.

Aiding in the establishment of the new store here were E. A. Stillman director of advertising for the south-central region, and J. W. Harper, Louisiana district manager.

New Premium Tire Offered At Penney's

The J. C. Penney Company is introducing a new Premium tire featuring wrap - around safety tread design, at its new Auto Center here.

Penney's new Foremost Premium tire features all-nylon cord with more than 11,300 gripping edges for increased traction and road contact. The added traction insures safer turns on fast, sharp curves as well as surer starts and quicker stops.

The tire's new, four-rib safety tread eliminates control-loss on such potentially hazardous areas as divider strips and highway shoulders.

Each of Penney's new Premium tires carries a full, 36-month guarantee. The new tire comes in 13, 14 and 15-inch sizes, the new narrow whitewall or blackwall, tube-type or tubeless.

As part of its promotion of the new safety tire, Penney Auto Center in the new Mid - City Plaza Store will offer motorists free tire mounting, free tire rotation every 5,000 miles and free puncture repair for the life of the tire's original tread.

Penney's introduced its automotive lines, carrying the brand name Foremost, in the summer of 1963. The Foremost line now offers four types of tires ranging in price from Economy and Reliant models to Custom and the Premium with the all new safety tread design. Penney's all nylon tire line features polybutadiene an extremely tough synthetic rubber compound highly resistant to abrasion and cracking.

Garage Serves Living Space

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time was when a garage was the repository for a motley collection of items ranging from lawn mowers to baby buggies. Space permitting, it was used occasionally as a shelter for the family car.

Nowadays, more and more modern homeowners are utilizing their garages for living space—particularly during the summer months.

"It doesn't take a great deal of imagination — or perspiration — to convert a garage into valuable space," says Norm Kohler, a remodeling authority.

AREA SPORTSMEN will find excitement in the new sporting goods center at Penney's ultra-modern department store, Louisville at North 18th. Featured is a complete line of recreational equipment for the entire family. The department, another of the many new ones for the shopping center site, will carry a full selection of golfing equipment and hunting and fishing gear. Highlight of the department will be a professional bowling center where bowling balls can be measured and drilled while the customer waits. Various sizes of pool tables will also be available.

Floor Care Appliances Big Feature

Monroe's new Penney store has been selected to introduce the company's new line of private brand floor care appliances to this area.

A new line of Penncrest tank, canister and upright cleaners, hand vacuums, combination floor polisher and rug shampoo applicator and lightweight vacuum cleaners go on sale here Wednesday at Mid-City Plaza.

The chain's de luxe upright cleaner will be offered as a dual-purpose machine for cleaning rugs and carpets as well as room cleaning.

The new shampoo - polisher comes with all accessories needed to scrub, wax and polish hard surface floors or to shampoo rugs and carpets.

Penney's new floor care line will come in soft shades of green, brown, blue and white with sturdy all-steel bodies for extra durability.

Penney's floor care equipment is distinctive in its field and was designed especially for the chain. The company's new line of floor care appliances will contain such convenient features as:

A "double stretch" hose that will reach upstairs.

"Ten Second Bag Change" that keeps hands clean.

"All-round furniture guard" for complete protection.

Penney's Sports Area To Be Mecca

Area sportsmen will find their mecca at the new Mid-City Plaza Penney's department store.

This store, opening Wednesday at Louisville Ave. and No. 18th St., will feature one of the chain's largest and most complete sporting goods departments.

The center will provide a complete selection of recreational equipment for the entire family, according to Harlan Johnson, store manager.

One of the highlights of the new department will be a professional bowling center where Penney associates will be available to measure and drill bowling balls while the customer waits.

Golfers will find a complete line of bags, clubs, balls, carts and accessories by such well-known manufacturers as Wilson, Spalding, MacGregor and Fairway.

There's good news for the camping fan, also. A full line of Coleman camping equipment will be offered.

Penney's new sporting center will have one of the area's outstanding hunting and fishing departments, featuring such popular brands as Garcia, Zebco and Shakespeare.

Trained Penney sales associates, who have extensive experience in the sale and use of these fine sporting goods lines, will be available to see the sportsman finds the equipment suited to his needs.

On hand for Penney's opening will be several manufacturer's representatives who will answer questions about sporting needs.

Instruction will be available on casting, care and use of game shooting weapons and the art of making lines and lures for fishing.

Other New Lines

Besides Penney's new sporting goods center, a number of other new departments will be included in the spacious department store.

A sleep shop will include all types of bedding, including a king-size bedding section.

Other departments will include house wares, gift shop, candy corner, office equipment and supplies, record and book shop, national brand cosmetic counters, year-round toy department, hardware, power and hand tools, paint division, plumbing supplies, a complete pictures-mirrors-and lamps alcove, total carpeting and room-size rugs and Early American furniture selections.

Another special feature of Penney's Mid-City Plaza will be the in-home custom decorating service.

Exciting Features To Greet Shoppers

A multitude of exciting features will greet the eyes of shoppers at the new Penney's Mid-City Plaza department store.

Color plays an important role in the overall planning. The main floor walls consists of various shades of neutral and off-white. Much of the area is carpeted, with the remainder tiled.

Each department has a unique display area, with decor befitting the merchandise, i.e., fluer de lis for boys, floral for girls. Also, each department has its name clearly visible to the shopper.

Attractively arranged throughout the main floor currently are brown, russet and yellow decorations in the fall motif. These special decorations will be changed to coincide with different seasons.

More than 100 mannequins are used to display clothing and accessories.

Display racks for piece goods contain hundreds of bolts of material easy to see and convenient to reach.

An interesting area of the store is the wig bay, with Chippendale furniture for m'lady to relax in while being fitted with the latest imitation coiffure of the day.

Penney's Mid-City Plaza is completely air conditioned — right down to the display windows — and indirect lighting is used throughout.

Carpeted floors, paneled walls and soothing shades of furniture and upholstery are features of the second-floor offices. An employes' lunch room and a conference room are also located on this floor.

The stock room is equipped with a conveyor belt which saves many man hours. The automation takes material off sections of the conveyor belt and deposits them neatly in the storing area. There is also a floating freight dock on the ground floor where merchandise can be easily handled before being placed on the conveyor belt and thus to the second floor stock room.

THE BIG PICTURE will be on display at Penney's Mid-City Plaza center, where the company's own label "Penncrest" lines of television becomes available to area shoppers Wednesday. Penney's new Home Electronic Center will carry a complete selection of black-and white and color television, plus a large assortment of hi-fi, stereo and phonographs. This department is one of several ones to be featured on the spacious 56,000 square foot main floor of Penney's Mid-City Plaza store.

Different Concept Is Key Of New Penney Store Here

"A different concept for Penney's" is the key to the J. C. Penney Company's department store to open here Wednesday at the Mid-City Plaza shopping center, Louisville Ave. at North 18th.

Two watchwords of the elaborate project are "completeness and newness."

"This is a complete department store," according to Harlan Johnson, store manager. "Penney's has a lot of everything to offer with old-fashioned service and old - fashioned prices."

Johnson, who came to Monroe in December as manager of the Penney's, said through the years in this area Penney's has been known as one kind of store, but the new location will have many items never carried by the local store before.

Wide Range

"There is a wider assortment of merchandise and a wider range in prices," he said.

Doors of the ultra - modern, 90,000 square foot store will be opened to the public at 10 a.m. Wednesday. A brief ceremony will be held 15 minutes prior to the opening.

This will mean another new industry for Monroe, as Penney's Mid-City Plaza store will have a payroll of more than one-half million dollars annually.

The basic staff will be composed of 180 workers, but this number will grow to nearly 400 during peak seasons. By comparison, 30 persons were employed at Penney's downtown, with 45 the maximum number employed during peak periods.

Adequate parking facilities surrounding the store will accommodate 650 automobiles. Arrangements are being made to secure additional parking spaces for volume holiday shopping.

Two Floors

The new J. C. Penney's department store is housed in a two-story section of the Mid-City Plaza complex. The main floor contains 56,000 square feet of space, with appealing varieties of decor and merchandise arranged for the convenience of the shopper.

The second floor consists of functional office suites for the officials. Also on the second floor are the store room, merchandising room, advertising and promotional planning offices, personnel division, lay away section and alterations room.

Penney's high quality—which has been proved in merchandise carried at the old downtown store — will be carried through in the many new departments.

Some of the departments in the new store at Mid-City Plaza include cosmetics, jewelry, drugs, sleep center, lamps and mirrors, floor coverings, house wares, sporting goods, hardware, books, records, candy, bath shop, drapery salon, gift shop, office equipment and supplies, year-round toy division, power and hand tools, paint nooks, plumbing supplies, home custom decorating service, and early American furniture.

Among the new lines of merchandise being featured in the enlarged stocks at Penney's are "high quality" appliances and television sets, manufactured especially to meet the firm's exacting standards.

Television sets will include a broad range of black and white and color models, with considerable emphasis on color sets.

In the major appliances, which will be of exclusive design, will be refrigerators, washers, dryers, freezers, air conditioners, ranges, portable dishwashers and dehumidifiers.

There also will be Penney-brand radios and phonographs in the new electronics department, as well as Penncrest lines of clocks.

A record and book shop will offer a variety of selections for persons in all age groups.

Penney's line of floor care appliances will include Penncrest tank, canister and upright cleaners, hand vacuums, and combination floor polisher and rug shampoo applicator, among other things.

For those who need items in the paint and hardware line, the new store will have a department with a complete line of power tools, paint, bench tools, lighting fixtures, and other things, as well as a Home Improvement Center for the "Do-It-Yourself" fan. Among the power tools will be drills, circular saws, sabre saws, orbital and belt sanders, routers and grinders. Penncraft paints which will be featured will be of types to fit a broad range of needs for both indoor and outdoor use. Also included will be the other accessories and materials which are needed in the workshop, and in building and repair work.

A toy department, which will be open year around, will expand in the fall and winter seasons appraoching the holidays, offering many delightful and fascinating things for the children.

SERVICE MANAGER for Penney's new auto center at Mid-City Plaza is W. W. "Buster" Hinson. The center, first one for this area, features a complete line of batteries, tires and auto accessories. The move into tires, batteries and accessories by the nation-wide department store chain is the latest in an expansion of merchandising lines that will give Penney customers more complete shopping facilities. The auto center is located adjacent to the Penney's-Plaza department store at Louisville Ave. and No. 18th.

DELIGHTFUL ARRAY of Penney's private brand appliance is ready for viewing at the Mid-City Plaza department store when it opens on Wednesday August 25. Introduced at the event will be the company's new line of "Penncrest" refrigerators, washers, dryers, ranges, freezers and air conditioners. The store will also feature floor care appliances, paint and hardware and power tools. Each display area has a decor especially suited for the merchandise it contains.

Penney's Own Appliances To Be Featured

Penney's Mid-City Plaza department store will offer the campany's own brand of major appliances and televisions beginning Wednesday.

Both appliances and TV sets are being manufactured to Penney's rigid specifications and quality standards, according to Harlan Johnson, store manager.

Penney's new 90,000 square foot store in Monroe will be among the first in the 1,700-unit chain to offer the new lines of merchandise, which carry the brand name "Penncrest."

TOP QUALITY

In addition to exclusive design and top quality, Johnson said Penney's has a complete assortment covering all eight lines of free-standing major appliances — refrigerators, washers, dryers, freezers, air conditioners, ranges, portable dishwashers and dehumidifiers.

While Hotpoint division of General Electric will be the major supplier of Penney appliances, Johnson emphasized that the line will be distinctively and exclusively Penney's.

Penney's is offering a complete line of black-and-white television sets, including portables. consoles and combinations as well as a selection of color sets.

The TV sets will join a full assortment of Penney-brand radios and phonographs in the stores' new home electronics department.

RADIO-PHONOS

The Penncrest lines of clock, table and transistor radios and portable and console phonographs are designed for every age, need and interest, said the Penney manager.

REFRIGERATORS

The 1965 line of Penncrest refrigerators consists of seven models, six of which are "customer-preferred" two-doors. All two-doors feature the exclusive "Direct - Aire" cooling system, which directs cold air into the fresh food compartment evenly, chills food uniformly, and maintains uniform, proper humidity. Top of the line is an 18 cubic foot "frostless" Imperial two - door model with bottom mount 210 - pound freezer. Through use of new "Mirathin" insulation, the model is no larger than the regular 14 cubic foot model.

WASHERS

Penney's new line of major appliances will include three automatic washers, each with Penney's exclusive "Hydro-flex" wash system and all-porcelain finish.

The washers range from a multi - speed program model with automatic bleach and fabric conditioner dispenser to a three cycle-single speed washer.

Along with the three automatics, Penney's is offering a custom wringer washer for housewives who prefer this method of washing.

DRYERS

An exclusive drying system known as "Blend-Aire" drying is the main feature of Penney's four-model line of two electric and two gas dryers.

Blend-Aire drying utilizes just the right around of air with low heat required to dry clothes fast as the washer washes.

Other features of the Penncrest dryers are front and back suspension, which gives the drum support in both front and rear; rustproof porcelain top; and safety start button, which prevents small children from putting unwanted items in the dryer while the heat is on.

Penney's complete assortment of major appliances also includes freezers, air conditioners, ranges, portable dishwashers and dehumidifiers.

CLEAN SWEEP for Penneys is demonstrated by James Cash Penney, left, who founded the company more than 63 years ago, comparing the cleaning tool he used in his first store with the new "Penncrest" vacuum model examined by C. L. Wright, vice president and general sales manager. Penney's new line of floor care appliances goes on sale in the company's Mid-City Plaza department store here Wednesday. The floor care appliances are just a few of Penney's new lines to be carried at the 90,000 square foot store.

Penney's Will Offer Four New Ways To Shop

"Charge it at Penney's!"

Penney's Mid-City Plaza department store will offer four convenient ways to shop.

1. Regular charge account—no service charge for any purchase if paid in full within 30 days after the billing date, small service charge and up to months to pay.

2. Time payment plan — for major purchases of home needs.

3. Lay-Away — small deposit holds purchase, small regular payments hold purchase until paid out - or - balance can be transferred to charge account and customer takes purchase home.

4. Cash — buy at Penney's traditionally low prices.

These plans are so flexible they work hand in hand with the customer's budget — and Penney's is only pleased if the customer is pleased.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:
During the summer months when I hang the wash outdoors, I find this procedure to be quite a timesaver:

I turn all my socks rightside out and hang them around the top of my plastic basket and through the spokes so that they do not blow away. When clothes are "harvested" from the line, socks are all ready for taking indoors.

They dry beautifully.

Mildred Knauf

MILLIE:
That's a lulu!

Prevents marks on socks from clothespins, saves energy pinning each one on the line and removing it, adds clothesline space, etc.

Just for fun, you precious wives, stop a minute right now and figure out how many socks you wash each week and multiply that by 52, then by the number of years you expect to live!

Amazing!

Think of the time you could save by using Mildred's method.

WHAT A SCOOP!

DEAR HELOISE:
Being a serious stamp collector, may I offer my suggestion on the removal of stamps from envelopes?

I either cut off or tear off the corner of the envelope which bears the stamp. After I have several, I put them in a pan or glass of water and let them soak only until the stamps come loose and slide off the paper.

Then I place the stamps face up on an old newspaper to dry.

This way I have no damaged stamps.

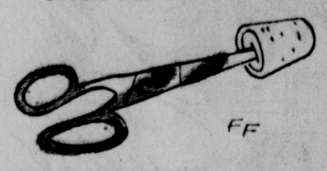
STICK TO THE POINTS



DEAR HELOISE:
One way to prevent scissors from damaging your sewing bag is to push an ordinary cork onto the points of the scissors.

The cork makes an excellent place for keeping your thimble, too. Just put it over the other end.

Mrs. Margene Emge

SICK ROOM TRAYS

DEAR HELOISE:
When a member of the family is confined to bed, place a damp paper towel or damp paper napkin under the dishes on the bed tray! The dampness of the towel will prevent the dishes from slipping and can be used to clean the patient's fingers after the meal is finished.

Mrs. G. W.

EDUCATED LUNCH

DEAR HELOISE:
Making sandwiches is a real morning chore for mothers who have several children in school.

Let the youngsters help you make the sandwiches during the week end. They will love to choose their own fillings and will look forward to finding the sandwiches (which they made) in their lunches.

I have found that some of the fillings which freeze best are leftover sliced roast beef, luncheon meats, baked ham, chicken, turkey, dried beef, sliced cheese or cheese spreads, hard-cooked egg yolks (the whites of hard-boiled eggs have a tendency to become tough when frozen) and peanut butter.

Wrap the sandwiches separately, label them and put them in the freezer.

The sandwiches can be put into the lunch pail without thawing, and by noon, they will be completely thawed.

VISIBLE INFLATION

DEAR HELOISE:
I use my glass pie or cake-pan cover over my rising bread dough.

I can see the dough rising thru the glass, and the lid is high enough so it doesn't stick, the way a cloth does.

Mrs. Cecil Schiffert

ALL TIED UP

DEAR HELOISE:
A dress and its belt can be kept together and never lost on a trip to the cleaners, or when stored, by simply slipping the belt through a sleeve of the dress and buckling the belt.

DEAR HELOISE:
For extra-large and different ice cubes, I use cup-cake tins. Just fill the trays with water and freeze!

To thaw, I run a little water over the bottom of the pan and the cubes slip free!

These large cubes are wonderful for punch bowls.

DEAR HELOISE:
The other day I was putting a "skirt" around the wooden chest in which I keep my sewing. My fingers were getting sore from pushing in all those thumbtacks, when I happened to think of using my thimble.

I just put it on my thumb and punched, punched, punched away and had the rest of the tacks secured on the chest in nothin' flat!

DEAR HELOISE:
Here's a cute idea I saw recently in a restaurant:

A little girl's father put a napkin around her neck, then used his fountain pen to hold it in place.

He slid the clip of the pen over the two thicknesses of the napkin at the back of her neck, and it held perfectly!

DEAR HELOISE:
When filling plastic bags with food to be placed in the freezer, if you leave a lot of space in the top of the bag before fastening it, you can spread the bag out flat to save room in the freezer.

They will stack very nicely.

FUTURE REMBRANDTS

DEAR HELOISE:
I have found that if I carry a rubber eraser around in my cleaning basket I can easily remove Junior's works of art from many things around the house. . . .
